GOING HOME

- Hundreds of thousands of Syrians return after peace deal
- Trump-Putin alliance may have reversed Obama debacle

By Richard Walker

According to a Swiss-based migration study, more than 600,000 Syrian refugees have returned to their towns, cities, and villages in the past six months. For President Donald Trump and the White House, following depressing news for the past few weeks, this is a sign that the brokered peace deal is paying off and that things are rapidly changing for the better in Syria.

The belief of so many Syrians that it is safe to go home has confirmed a trend that began slowly in the past year and has lately gained traction. The momentum and the confidence driving refugees back to Syria rather than fleeing from it would appear to confirm that Trump's military alliance with Russia's Vladimir Putin has begun to bear fruit.

There is little doubt that Russia's intervention in Syria and the military cooperation Trump has forged with the Kremlin to defeat radical groups have had a major impact on the war against terror.

In contrast, under the Obama

According to multiple news agencies, a rising number of people—603,000 and counting—who had fled Syria have returned to their homes, mainly in Aleppo, Hama, Homs, and Damascus. Above, Syrians in Turkey prepare to go home.

regime, the Pentagon and CIA fanned the flames of war by providing military support and training to Islamic militias, including the al-Nusra Front, which was also backed by Israel and Saudi Arabia. The main objective of that alliance was not the defeat of ISIS but the removal of the Syrian government. The backing of Sunni terror groups by Washington and its allies risked removing Bashar al-Assad, who was fighting ISIS and its co-conspirators, al Qaeda.

Putin, by stepping in to support the Syrian military, put a halt to the gains of the Islamic extremist groups. That in turn set in motion the beginning of the rollback of ISIS gains in Syria.

With the arrival of Trump in the White House, the anti-ISIS military campaign was given a new lease on life as the White House ordered the U.S. military to coordinate with the Russ-

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE EDITOR

FREE EXPRESSION IN REAL DANGER

As the editors and writers wrap up this week's issue of AMERICAN FREE PRESS, it will have been eight weeks since Wells Fargo and TSYS, the billion-dollar company Wells Fargo contracts to assess financial risk, abruptly and arbitrarily canceled our credit card processing account.

We have written about this situation in detail before, but it bears repeating. For over four years, AFP had been doing business with a small credit card processor based out of Baltimore. The company was locally owned, and its customer service people were always available to help us in the event something went wrong. But six months ago, that company was bought out by Wells Fargo. After auditing the Baltimore-based company's client list, the banking behemoth decided to not only cancel AFP's account but to put us on a blacklist—known colloquially as the Match List—thereby preventing us from opening a merchant account with any credit card processor in the United States.

Since that time, this editor has personally worked with over a half-dozen companies that process credit cards. In each case so far, however, we've either been rejected in the end or the company just stopped taking my calls. In the words of one seasoned sales representative, who has been trying to help out AFP, "I've never seen anything like this before in my entire career."

To make matters worse, the recent debacle in Charlottesville has only made it harder to do business in the U.S. The federal government, banks, tech companies, and the mainstream media have all stepped up their efforts to marginalize

Freedom of speech is under direct assault from many ultra-radical groups including the mainstream press. But at least one organization, the National Rifle Association, is challenging the mainstream news media's grip on "reality."

any conservative or politically incorrect organization or individual that questions the powers-that-be—regardless of who started the violence that day or even who was in attendance. Over the course of the past week, we've been hearing about more and more people and groups losing their credit card processing accounts, their PayPal accounts, and even their website addresses—effectively driving them out of business. And while it doesn't help the situation, we can take some comfort in the fact that AFP is not alone in this mess.

Thankfully, other organizations are fighting back like AFP is doing. Check out Dave Gahary's article on page eight in this edition on the National Rifle Association (NRA). In a series of recent videos, NRA spokeswoman Dana Loesch has been giving both barrels to the mainstream media as well as the radical left, which has been fanning the flames of hysteria in this country using fake news and hyperbole.

The problem here is that the people who support clamping down on free expression in this country don't realize they are hurting themselves as well. Free and unfettered discussion—no matter what one believes—is a sign of a healthy democratic republic. Populations and countries do change, and there could be a time in the not-so-distant future when the U.S. government becomes so empowered that there will be stiff repercussions for even minor criticisms of policies on immigration, healthcare, corruption, or personal freedom—whether they come from the right or the left.

In any event, this editor would like to take a moment to personally thank each and every subscriber who has come forward to support us. We know it hasn't been easy to renew or buy books from us, but the best things in life never are. We plan on sticking around for generations to come, and, with your help, we can't lose. ★

News You May Have Missed

Good News

Four supporters of Nevada rancher Cliven Bundy have been found not guilty of numerous charges relating to their 2014 protests to stop the federal government from taking the Bundys' cattle. On Aug. 22, The Arizona Republic reported that Scott Drexler, Ricky Lovelien, Eric Parker, and Steven Stewart were found not guilty on several charges, including conspiracy, assault on a federal officer, extortion, and weapons violations. The jury was reportedly deadlocked on four charges for Parker and two against Drexler, meaning they could face a retrial. This is the second time a jury has failed to convict the men. They have been in prison since 2016.

AL SHARPTON

Trump was Right

Marxists and radical leftists are engaged in a rabid drive to tear down Confederate and white monuments nationwide. Their claim is that the boys in gray supported slavery, making all memory of them offensive to black people. President Donald Trump ridiculed the extremists, speculating their next move could be against George Washington and Thomas Jefferson because they owned slaves, and sure enough, now comes the "Rev." Al Sharpton saying Congress should defund the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, D.C. Says Sharpton: "The public should not be paying to uphold somebody who [owned slaves or supported slavery]."

Confederate Bomber

A Houston man who's previously been convicted on explosives-related charges has been arrested after he was caught by police trying to plant explosives on a Confederate statue at a Houston park. Andrew Schneck, 25, was busted on the evening of Aug. 19 near a statue of Richard Dowling, a lieutenant in the Confederate Army. A Houston park ranger reportedly found Schneck holding two boxes with duct tape and wires as well as a bottle and a small tube containing compounds that tests later revealed were explosive materials.

Moving in for the Kill

Two Democratic lawmakers proposed a bill to ban Confederate monuments from federal property. Reps. Adriano Espaillat (N.Y.) and Dwight Evans (Pa.) introduced the "No Federal Funding for Confederate Symbols Act." Meanwhile Rep. Corey Booker (N.J.) tweeted that he will be introducing a bill to remove Confederate statues from the U.S. Capitol Building. "We have much work to do," he tweeted.

Trigger Warning

Cable sports television channel ESPN has pulled a college football announcer from the upcoming game between William & Mary College and the University of Virginia because the man's name is Robert Lee, and he could trigger some watchers. "We collectively made the decision with Robert to switch games as the tragic events in Charlottesville were unfolding, simply because of the coincidence of his name," said an ESPN spokesman in an official statement. "In that moment it felt right to all parties. It's a shame that this is even a topic of conversation and we regret that who calls play by play for a football game has become an issue."

Another Trigger Warning

A group of young men and women, some of whom were wearing Trump gear, reportedly "triggered" the Howard University community over the weekend of Aug. 19-20 when they dared attempt to eat lunch in the school's cafeteria. According to online posts and photographs, the group was accosted by university members simply because they were wearing "Make America Great" hats and t-shirts. At one time, Howard University admitted all Americans, but in the late 1970s, administrators decided to be a college for black people only.

President's War Power Challenged

A U.S. Court of Appeals case is pending that may pose a major challenge to the ability of presidents to unilaterally launch long, drawn-out wars and could reassert the court's authority to declare a war illegal. The case, brought by Army Capt. Nathan Michael Smith, questions the legality of the U.S. war against ISIS, noting the war was never declared per the Constitution, nor was it even authorized by Congress as part of a War Powers Act Authorization for the Use of Military Force. Currently, the War Powers Act allows the use of force only for 60 days without congressional authorization, and the war against ISIS has been dragging on for three years.

Rein in Nuke First Strike

Rep. Ted Lieu (D-Calif.) has introduced a bill—H.R.669—intended to rein in the president's ability to order a first strike of nuclear weapons. Sen. Edward J. Markey (D-Mass.) has introduced similar legislation (S. 200) in the Senate. While the bills are specifically directed against President Donald Trump, limiting any president's power to fire nuclear weapons would be a good thing.

REP. TED LIEU

Fix Immigration Policy

Former presidential hopeful Darrell Castle of the Constitution Party is advocating the RAISE Act—Reforming America's Immigration for a Strong Economy. The act was proposed by Sen. Tom Cotton (R-Ark.) in February, as AFP has reported. The bill would limit chain immigration for green card holders to spouses and dependent children only, limit the number of "refugees," and eliminate the lottery. It would also raise the status of American workers by limiting immigrant competition for less-skilled jobs.

Gunman Saves the Day

Witnesses reportedly said they saw Bobby Martin Watson, 49, attempting to rob a woman in a Publix grocery store parking lot in Seminole, Fla. recently. She struggled with the man, and he stabbed her and ran. Christopher McMann, 44, approached, only to be stabbed as well. Travis Jones, 31, then chased and tackled Watson, and was stabbed in the abdomen. Still another good Samaritan, Donald Rush, 40, grabbed a gun from his vehicle and ran at Watson and was able to take the knife and hold the culprit at gunpoint—not needing to fire—until deputies arrived.

Secrets of Antarctica

The south polar continent is home to many secrets. Locked in or under its ice, 91 previously unknown volcanoes have recently been discovered. A research team from Scotland's University of Edinburgh used ice-penetrating radar, plus survey data from airplanes and satellites, to study 138 Antarctic volcanic peaks, most of them formerly unknown. The largest is 12,500 feet tall—comparable to the Swiss Alps. Other scientists discovered in the frozen continent one of the largest proteins ever found—used by a bacterium, Marinomonas primoryensis, to latch on to diatoms; the bacterium forms a symbiotic relationship with the microscopic alga.

ian military with only one objective: the defeat of ISIS and its cohorts.

Now, it is only a matter of time before Raqqa, the city ISIS considered the capital of its so-called caliphate, will fall. Already, ISIS is being routed across the Middle East, following its defeat in Iraq's Mosul.

Syrian refugees living in Europe and in parts of the Middle East have been closely watching the military gains against ISIS in Syria, driven by the strength of the Trump-Putin alliance. As parts of Syria have been liberated by Russian, U.S., Iranian, Turkish, and Syrian forces, Syrians are returning to reclaim their homes and businesses.

One of the striking things about the anti-ISIS alliance is that Turkey, a NATO member, has had no misgivings about working with Iranian forces in Syria. That is in stark contrast to the views being expressed on Capitol Hill that Iran is supporting terror. In fact, the Iranians have been on the front lines against ISIS, working closely with Russian and Syrian military units.

There are few in Washington who would have forecast this development at the start of 2017, but if it continues, as appears likely, the refugees returning to Syria could soon be counted in the millions.

In neighboring nations like Jordan, Lebanon, and Turkey there are at least 1 million refugees prepared to return if recent events on the ground continue to see ISIS destroyed. The fall of Raqqa, which is now a certainty, will attract the return of even larger numbers of refugees, just as the fall of Aleppo did earlier this year.

It is only a matter of time before more ISIS-controlled cities fall, allowing more refugees to go home.

While the Trump-Putin alliance yields success and unexpected good news, the migrant crisis in Europe has gotten worse. However, the flow of migrants is not from Syria, but from Libya, which became a failed state after President Barack Obama, France's Nicolas Sarkozy, and Britain's David Cameron decided to back a coup against Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi. Evidence shows that Sarkozy wanted to remove Qaddafi in order to seize Libya's oil.

The increasing flow of Libyan migrants, assisted by a massive organized crime effort in Libya's ports, is placing Italy and Spain in jeopardy. The migrants and ISIS terrorists see both countries as a transit hub to other parts of the EU, particularly France and Germany.

On Aug. 17, Spain was hit by terrorists when radical Islamists rammed a car into pedestrians in Barcelona, killing 13 people and injuring 100. That same day, another person was killed when another vehicle slammed into pedestrians in the resort town of Cambrils, about 70 miles from Barcelona. Spanish police averted a tragedy there, though,

VLADIMIR PUTIN

Thank goodness if Vladimir Putin did meddle in the 2016 U.S. election. If Hillary Clinton had been elected, our military funding of ISIS would never have ended and millions of Syrian refugees would never have been able to return home. Has he saved the West?

when they shot and killed all five suspects as they tried to flee from the car.

Following the attack, "Voice of America" reported that Spanish investigators were looking into the attackers' ties to radical Islamist groups in North Africa.

"[Spanish counterterrorism officials] and their counterparts elsewhere in Europe see an emerging trend of North African links behind the recent spate of terror attacks," reported "Voice of America." ★

A Matter of Honor: Pearl Harbor Betrayal, Blame, and a Family's Quest for Justice

In 2016—the 75th anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack, Anthony Summers and Robbyn Swan helped unravel the mysteries of Pearl Harbor to expose the scapegoating of the admiral who was in command the day 2,000 Americans died, report on the continuing struggle to restore his lost honor—and clear President Franklin D. Roosevelt of the charge that he knew the attack was coming.

The Japanese onslaught on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941 devastated Americans and precipitated entry into World War II. In the aftermath, Adm. Husband Kimmel, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, was relieved of command, accused of negligence and dereliction of duty—publicly disgraced.

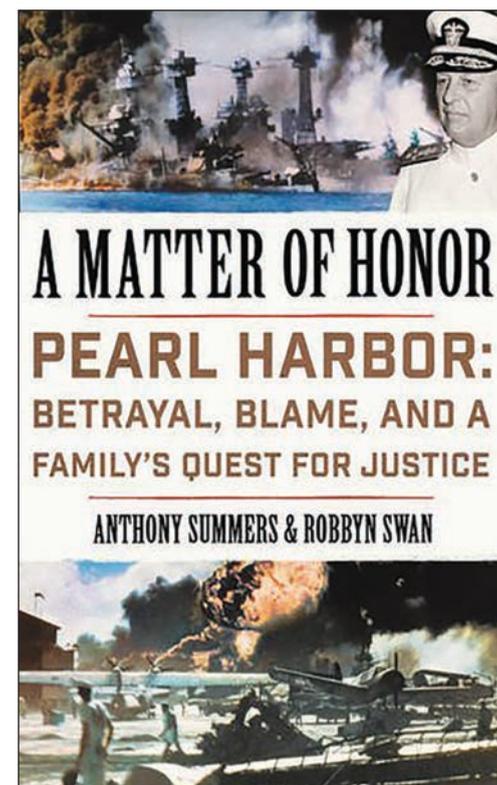

But the admiral defended his actions through eight investigations and for the rest of his long life. The evidence against him was less than solid. High military and political officials had failed to provide Kimmel and his Army counterpart, Gen. Walter Short, with vital intelligence. Later, to hide the biggest U.S. intelligence secret of the day, they covered it up.

Following the admiral's death, his sons—both Navy veterans—fought on to clear his name. Now that they in turn are dead, Kimmel's grandsons continue the struggle. For them, 2016 was a pivotal year.

With unprecedented access to documents, diaries, and letters, and the family's cooperation, Summers's and Swan's search for the truth has taken them far beyond the Kimmel story—to explore claims of duplicity and betrayal in high places in Washington.

A Matter of Honor is a provocative story of politics and war, of a man willing to sacrifice himself for his country only to be sacrificed himself. Revelatory and definitive, it is an invaluable contribution to our understanding of this pivotal event.

The book includes 40 black-and-white photos. Softcover, 544 pages, illustrated, #762, $35 minus 10% for TBR subscribers. Order from THE BARNES REVIEW, 16000 Trade Zone Avenue, Unit 406, Upper Marlboro, MD 20774. Cash, check, money order.

Freedom for the Speech We Hate

• It's time to stand up for First Amendment, whether we like what's being said or not

By John W. Whitehead

There was a time in this country, back when the British were running things, that if you spoke your mind and it ticked off the wrong people, you'd soon find yourself in jail for offending the king of England.

Reacting to this injustice, when it was time to write the Constitution, America's founders argued for a Bill of Rights, of which the First Amendment protects the right to free speech. James Madison, the father of the Constitution, was very clear about the fact that he wrote the First Amendment to protect the minority against the majority.

What Madison meant by minority is "offensive speech."

Unfortunately, we don't honor that principle as much as we should today. In fact, we seem to be witnessing a politically correct philosophy at play, one shared by both the extreme left and the extreme right, which aims to stifle all expression that doesn't fit within their parameters of what they consider to be "acceptable" speech.

There are all kinds of labels put on such speech—it's been called politically incorrect speech, hate speech, offensive speech, and so on—but really, the message being conveyed is that you don't have a right to express yourself if certain people or groups don't like or agree with what you are saying.

Hence, we have seen the caging of free speech in recent years, through the use of so-called "free speech zones" on college campuses and at political events, the requirement of speech permits in parks and community gatherings, and the policing of online forums.

JAMES MADISON

James Madison, the father of the Constitution, was very careful to protect the free speech rights of those people who disagreed with the "majority."

Clearly, this elitist, monolithic mindset is at odds with everything America is supposed to stand for.

Indeed, we should be encouraging people to debate issues and air their views. Instead, by muzzling free speech, we are contributing to a growing underclass of Americans—many of whom have been labeled racists, rednecks, and religious bigots—who are being told that they can't take part in American public life unless they "fit in."

Remember, the First Amendment acts as a steam valve. It allows people to speak their minds, assemble, air their grievances, petition for change, and contribute to a larger dialogue that hopefully results in a more just world. When there is no steam valve to release the pressure, frustration builds, anger grows, and people become more volatile and desperate to force a conversation.

The attempt to stifle certain forms of speech is where we go wrong.

The Supreme Court has held that it is "a bedrock principle underlying the First Amendment . . . that the government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea offensive or disagreeable." For example, it is not a question of whether the Confederate flag represents racism but whether banning it leads to even greater problems, namely, the loss of freedom in general.

Along with the constitutional right to peacefully (and that means non-violently) assemble, the right to free speech allows us to challenge the government through protests and demonstrations and to attempt to change the world around us—for the better or the worse—through protests and counterprotests.

As always, knowledge is key.

If ever there were a time for us to stand up for the right to speak freely, even if it's freedom for speech we hate, the time is now. ★

Constitutional attorney and author John W. Whitehead is founder and president of the Rutherford Institute. His latest book, Battlefield America: The War on the American People, is available from AMERICAN FREE PRESS Bookstore.

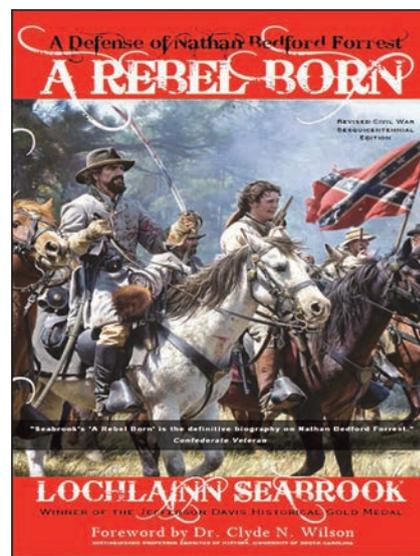

A Rebel Born: A Defense of Nathan Bedford Forrest

Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest was a brave and ingenious Confederate officer who won all but one of the battles he led; a philanthropist who gave generously to family, friends and charities; and a humanitarian who not only spared the lives of numerous Yankees on the battlefield, but who freed his slaves years before Lincoln issued his fake Emancipation Proclamation. Additionally, Forrest crusaded to bring new African immigrants into the South—with full civil rights. No one would know any of this by reading the typical works on Forrest. In fact, according to most authors, Forrest was a violent redneck, a racist, a barbaric slave trader, a philandering husband, an illiterate hillbilly, the founder and grand wizard of the KKK, and "the butcher of Fort Pillow."

News flash: None of this is true.

In A Rebel Born: A Defense of Nathan Bedford Forrest—winner of the prestigious Jefferson Davis Historical Gold Medal—Lochlainn Seabrook, one of the South's most prolific and respected authors, reveals the truth about one of history's most fascinating, charismatic, complex, and romantic individuals. In this positive appraisal of Forrest, the author corrects the many falsehoods about "the Wizard of the Saddle" and, using well-researched documentation, shows that the modern negative image of the general derives solely from slanderous myths created 150 years ago by Lincoln's anti-South propaganda machine. The longest book ever written on Forrest, it contains 2,000 footnotes, hundreds of rare pictures, a list of Forrest's military engagements, an 800-book bibliography, a detailed index, and more! Which Water Should You Drink?

Nobel Prize Winner Albert Szentgyorgy: “The one that produces the most Hydrogen Energy . . . The Fuel of Life!”

The above statements inspired a patented method that gains HYDROGEN ENERGY each time water recycles . . . hundreds of times per gallon—NOT ONCE like ordinary purifiers and distillers! The results in the water reaching 30 TIMES THE MEASURABLE ENERGY of ANY other water!! (Watch our videos listed at www.johnellis.com and listed below.)

Just as food supplies energy, this is the only water that supplies the extra energy you may need to survive!

IS YOUR SKIN POSITIVELY OR NEGATIVELY CHARGED?

As positively charged Hydrogen Fuel is consumed, noted by Albert Szentgyorgy, even your skin becomes more negatively charged by oxygen electrons, i.e. a plain watch I wear on weekends (with a battery that usually lasts 2-3 years) hasn't had a battery change in 17 years!

INCREASE YOUR STRENGTH AND ENERGY

We have 13 International Patents, 332 FDA Tests. You've seen the ads for the elderly and/or feeble: “I've fallen, and I can't get up!” Why can't they get up? Because they lack the needed arm strength!

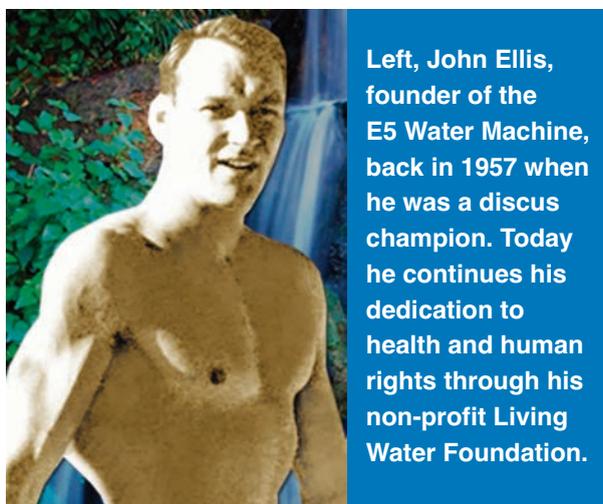

On the contrary, I am now in my 88th year and I warm up curling 50-lb. dumb bells in each hand even when strength starts to wane at 81 and a reverse curl over 200 pounds at 68 (witnesses said it's over the World Record).

THE HYDROGEN BOND ANGLE CAN BE CHANGED

With an Engineering Degree that includes Steam Plant Design, in college we were taught that ordinary distilled water with a Hydrogen Bond Angle (HBA) of only 101 degrees was worse than tap water with an HBA of 104.5 degrees. My water property change to 114 degrees was confirmed to The Washington Times by the Los Alamos Nuclear Lab: “He did change the hydrogen Bond Angle in water and we wish we owned his patents!” (See a video at JohnEllis.com created after a 1/27/92 Washington Post Investigative Article: “10,000 people a day said it cures anything, even cancer and diabetes.”)

SOMETHING YOU CAN MEASURE

That article also included an International Patent Description: “The curative power results from movements of water between two metal tanks,” producing results confirmed in another investigation by Guy Abraham, M.D. who taught at the UCLA Medical School doing Independent Blood Flow Studies on how to prevent a heart attack or stroke and FLUSH OUT THE BLOOD STREAM at the same time. He said, “You can't argue with something you can measure . . . the ability of blood

Left, John Ellis, founder of the E5 Water Machine, back in 1957 when he was a discus champion. Today he continues his dedication to health and human rights through his non-profit Living Water Foundation.

(94% water) to go through a membrane into the cells to the extremities. Nothing is even close to your water. Your HBA is 114 degrees!” Watch the two videos at JohnEllis.com PROVING you are drinking the wrong water . . . The results have been duplicated THOUSANDS of times, proving this water provides “BODY ELECTRIC” energy that powers your heart (defibrillator to stop a heart attack, pacemaker) because it takes less energy for the body to split water into Hydrogen and Oxygen. (Examples below, 31 amps to only 1 amp!!)

To stem the naysayers: My college engineering professor, Dr. John Weishampel, gave me the only grade of 100% in 30 years of teaching.

CONTROVERSY IS HEALTHY

Like THOMAS PAINE the author of Common Sense, anyone not generating controversy isn't doing much of anything . . . as true as God's accuracy revealed to me in the Power of a Perfect circle (360 degrees divided by Pi = 114 degrees almost exactly!).

Can atheists explain any of this?

Think about this:

- Eggs of each species always hatch at the same exact time divided by seven.
- Watermelons always have an even number of stripes.
- Oranges have an even number of segments

- Corn has an even number of rows.
 - Waves of the sea roll 26 per minute in all kinds of weather.
 - All grains have even numbers on the stalks.
- The Lord specified: thirty, sixty and hundred-fold—all even numbers!

AND SOMETIMES CONTROVERSY IS DANGEROUS

We lived at the top of Paine Avenue in New Rochelle, NY for 70 years and a musket ball hole in the wall of the Thomas Paine Cottage reminded visitors he was embroiled in major controversy. Fortunately they missed.

And, like the people below, including my grandmother's sister (Google: Nursing Sisters Port Dover . . . a book by Harry B. Barrett), in spite of being repeatedly mentioned in wartime dispatches for her heroism and “valor in the face of the enemy,” was presented only a certificate by King George V because a woman was ineligible to receive the Victoria Cross!

As a result, my grandmother moved to Rochester, NY and befriended SUSAN B. ANTHONY and American Red Cross Founder CLARA BARTON who said to her male counterparts: “We nursed you back to health and now we need your help!” Unfortunately, some of her male counterparts made sure help never came! There are hundreds of letters and pictures, including one of the ambulances my grandmother donated (before we entered WWII), encouraged by her friend CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT, who moved around the corner from her in New Rochelle. As a youngster, I remember all the sewing machines and their many friends at my grandmother's house sewing thousands of pre-die cut clothes together to keep children warm during the brutally cold English winters.

Controversial Ideas Not Always Welcome

The rear room on the first floor of Thomas Paine's house (above) in New Rochelle, N.Y. is known as the “Paine Room.” On Christmas Eve 1805, a gun was fired into this room in an attempt on Paine's life. He described the incident in a letter: “Whatever the gun was charged with passed through about three or four inches below the window making a hole large enough [for] a finger to go through—the muzzle must have been very near as the place is black with powder, and the glass of the window is shattered to pieces.”

BARTON CATT ANTHONY
Three brave gals dedicated to health & human rights.

Carrie is most famous for her speech before Congress that resulted in the 19th Amendment to the Constitution that gave women the right to vote in 1920!

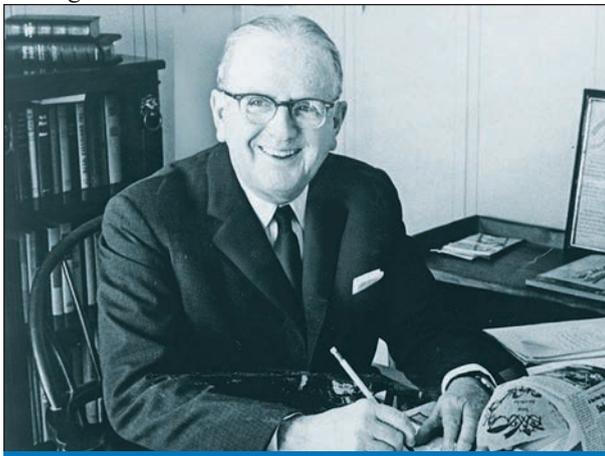

In most cases, there shouldn't be any controversy! Like government scientists at Brookhaven Labs after a mishap in the 1980's as to why they were buying so many of our machines: "You have the only product that recycles water to get rid of radiation!"

THE POWER OF POSITIVE THINKING

As I listened to DR. NORMAN VINCENT PEALE eulogize my father to an overflowing congregation in New Rochelle, I thought about increasing the lifespan of people like my Godfather, DR. JAMES E. WEST, Chief Boy Scout Executive from 1907-37, who helped thousands of youngsters discover a positive direction in life along with Norman Rockwell, who we all knew and loved, hired by Dr. West for Boy's Life Magazine including friends that modeled for Saturday Evening Post covers with a humanitarian impact rarely seen today.

Dr. Peale always came to our family gatherings with his "Power of Positive Thinking" that has had a positive impact on millions of lives including Joel Osteen and President Donald Trump!

Like the Catholic Priest who saw the Cross at ground Zero 9/11, forget controversy and dwell on a positive outcome like the Olympic athletes I have known that imagined themselves competing using Dr. Peale's powerful message!

WE'RE NOT NEW TO CONTROVERSY

I am not new to controversy: In 1957 I had the best discus throw in the World (T&F News, Vol. 10, No. 12) but gave it up because I knew Anabolic Steroids would cause users heart damage! All the top athletes were told they were safe by doctors. However, their inventor, John Ziegler M.D., said before he died at 63: "I wish I had listened to [John Ellis]. I damaged my own heart!"

Now, there is a long list of Olympic friends who are dead because they were "FDA Approved" (now banned). I was right then about anabolic steroids and I am right now about viruses and disease!

VIOLATING FARADAY'S LAW?

Here's what a man in Zurich said: "I have had your E5 Water Machine for only 24 hours. I had gross swelling in my legs and hadn't worn ordinary shoes in years. Your water immediately destroyed the markers for elephantiasis in my blood stream!! I lost all the water weight in my legs and I bought a pair of shoes size 10 1/2. Also unlike ordinary DDW, using electrolysis (a battery and two thin pieces of stainless steel, anode and cathode, not a stack that negates power) your water produces so much Hydrogen it violates Faraday's Law... producing the energy needed to stop disease!!"

AMAZING POWER PROPERTIES

A company that produces hydrogen generators for trucks found the required power slowly went down over 24 hours (a cascading effect that is immediate once it has been treated) from 31 amps to less than 1 amp making the same amount of hydrogen by adding only 20 drops of this water to ordinary water in their hydrogen generator (another web-site video)! Using this technology, you can power your car, heat your home and produce electricity for pennies. NRA Gunning for 'Fake News' Flagship

• Latest video by nonprofit gun rights group targets “Gray Hag” New York Times

By Dave Gahary

In a clear nod to the message this newspaper has been delivering since its inception, the country’s oldest “continuously operating civil rights organization,” the National Rifle Association of America (NRA), has the country’s “newspaper of record,” The New York Times, in its sights.

In a powerful, new 53-second video ad, the NRA unleashes a blistering, withering assault on the Times and uses spokesperson Dana Loesch to deliver its message.

Ms. Loesch (pronounced “lash”), who was hired in June of last year to be the NRA’s national spokesperson, is an award-winning journalist and television and talk-radio conservative political commentator, appearing on Fox News, CNN, CBS, ABC, and HBO among other outlets. She’s intelligent, attractive, and easy to listen to, with a delivery reminiscent of the late populist patriot Jim Traficant.

In the video ad, Ms. Loesch tells the Times:

We the people, have had it. We’ve had it with your narratives, your propaganda, your fake news. We’ve had it with your constant protection of your Democrat overlords, your refusal to acknowledge any truth that upsets the fragile construct that you believe is real life. And we’ve had it with your pretentious, tone-deaf assertion that you are in any way truth- or fact-based journalism. Consider this the shot across your proverbial bow. We’re going to “fisk” [refute] The New York Times and find out just what “deep rich” means to this old gray hag, this untrustworthy, dishonest rag that has subsisted on the welfare of mediocrity for one, two, three, more decades. We’re gonna laser-focus on your so-called honest pursuit of truth. In short, we’re coming for you.

The video can be viewed online by searching for the title, “Dana Loesch: We’re coming for you New York Times.” It’s certainly worth the watch.

Needless to say, “the ad sparked a serious backlash, with critics claiming it promotes violence,” as “Fox News Insider” reported, and it led one CNN analyst to claim he “reported” the NRA for “hate speech.”

An earlier NRA video ad from April of this year also raised the ire of the left. This 59-second video is quite powerful as well, and targets the Marxist factions intent on the destruction of this once-great nation.

Not only is Dana Loesch attractive, she is highly intelligent and an inspirational speaker who is as outspoken as any public figure we have seen in decades. Recently, she said the National Rifle Association would be declaring war on “fake news” media outlets, including The New York Times—the queen of fake news.

We the people have had it. We’ve had it with your [bogus] narratives, and your propaganda.

They use their media to assassinate real news. They use their schools to teach children that their president is another Hitler. They use their movie stars and singers and comedy shows and award shows to repeat their narrative over and over again. And then they use their ex-president to endorse the “resistance,” all to make them march, make them protest, make them scream racism and sexism and xenophobia and homophobia, to smash windows, burn cars, shut down interstates and airports, bully and terrorize the law-abiding, until the only option left, is for the police to do their jobs and stop the madness. And when that happens, they’ll use it as an excuse for their outrage. The only way we stop this, the only way we save our country and our freedom, is to fight this violence of lies with a clenched fist of truth. I’m the National Rifle Association of America, and I’m freedom’s safest place.

The soft terrorist group Black Lives Matter calls the ad “an open call to violence to protect white supremacy,” and a former speechwriter for President Barack Obama called it “revolting and frightening.” Sen. Chris Murphy (D-Conn.) went so far as to say: “I think the NRA is telling people to shoot us. Now might be the right time to cancel your membership.”

This video can also be viewed on the Internet by searching for the title, “Freedom’s Safest Place: Violence of Lies.” It, too, is certainly worth the watch.

No matter the so-called controversy created by the video ads, this is a good thing, and we say, “Hey, NRA, welcome to the real resistance. It took you long enough.” ★

No Safe Space for Free Speech

• The Virginia government's unprecedented assault on free speech

Readers will find that this AFP reporter's first-hand account of the violent protests in Charlottesville, Va. differs greatly from what Americans read about them in the controlled press and saw on mainstream TV. His report clearly shows that radical leftist groups started the attacks and that the city of Charlottesville and Virginia's state police only worked to make the situation far more dangerous for everyone there.

By Jacob Tyler

Aug. 12 marked the auspicious and violent passing of a truly monumental milestone for red-blooded American patriots of every stripe. Driven to activism in the streets by the ever-growing cacophony of anti-white rhetoric that marginalizes and maligns Caucasians on the sheer basis of their skin color amidst numerous acts of vandalism of Confederate monuments and calls for their immediate removal, large contingents of white nationalist organizations joined ranks with hundreds of Southern heritage advocates. The venue was Lee Park—recently renamed Emancipation Park—in Charlottesville, Va. The purpose was to protest a recent decision by Mayor Michael Signer and the city council to take down a monument to Robert E. Lee that has adorned that public green and overlooked the people of that city since 1924.

As fine a tribute to the revered and celebrated Confederate general as any, even a superficial glance reveals that no expense was spared on the 26-foot-tall bronze and granite sculpture when it was commissioned by philanthropist Paul Goodloe McIntire in 1917 to immortalize the life and legacy of a man universally recognized as one of the finest generals America has ever produced.

The fact that little if anything is sacred to the left was demonstrated yet again, however, when Charlottesville Vice Mayor Wes Bellamy began agitating for the statue's removal, for Lee's name to be stricken from the memorial, and for the grounds to be renamed Emancipation Park. The city council voted in February to remove the statue, and after months of public debate voted in June to rename the park.

The backlash to the decision was swift and widespread, sparking outrage from not just Southern heritage groups like Sons of Confederate Veterans and League of the South, but on the part of many locals as well.

A great deal of activism had already been orchestrated on this front by the time Jason Kessler, a conservative blogger and president of Unity and Security for America, an organization whose stated goal is the defense of Western civilization, announced he would be organizing a "Unite the Right" rally.

The name of the rally speaks to its purpose: uniting for a day the numerous factions of the right wing to gather together in solidarity in defense of Western civilization by protesting the pending removal of the Robert E. Lee monument.

The idea quickly gained steam, and acclaim for the event reached a fever pitch on social media with the announcement of a roster of speakers featuring a host of well-known personalities and luminaries.

Numerous organizations began collaborating on planning and preparation, and a formal motto of "You Will Not Replace Us" was adopted.

A formal alliance was announced between the Southern nationalist organization, League of the South, and the Traditionalist Workers Party, White Lives Matter, and Vanguard America among several others.

This reporter was in attendance at the Unite the Right Rally as a correspondent embedded with the League of the South, led by Dr. Michael Hill.

The night before the event, a meeting was called in which we were briefed in considerable detail by Ike Baker, a Marine Corps vet who coordinates operational security, and Mike Tubbs, another head of security for the league. We were briefed on safety procedures that were to be followed, Virginia state laws pertaining to self-defense, the code of conduct to which all in attendance would be held, and the significance of the event in general to every traditionalist and lover of their heritage.

"We're going to Lee Park to defend Gen. Lee's statue from the godless, civilization-destroying Antifa hordes," Baker said.

They urged everyone to exercise prudence above all else and only use deadly force in their own defense if in mortal dread for their lives.

"We have to act like we are the forces of light against the darkness in a holy war," Baker continued. "We are not here to look like the savages we came out to oppose."

Matt Heimbach of the Traditionalist Youth Worker Party remains calm as a critic makes a vulgar gesture. But, she did not assault him. She spoke her mind, he listened to her opinion, and free speech was served.

It was clear to all who were there that the Virginia state and local government did all they could to ensure violence occurred.

It was stated at numerous times by numerous rally organizers and participating organization leaders that the demonstration was to be a peaceful one. The plan was to march into the park, hold the line against any Black Lives Matter (BLM) and Antifa attempts to disrupt the event, listen to the speakers, and go home.

The likelihood of some violence breaking out was readily acknowledged and anticipated.

Great lengths were taken by First Amendment marchers to be prepared for whatever might come, but with the resolve that they would act only in self-defense. All attendees were encouraged to wear helmets and goggles.

The Traditionalist Workers Party procured a modest quantity of retired police riot shields. The League of the South had manufactured a number of their own. Scores of others carried bucklers and shields made from wood and emblazoned with a variety of nationalist and traditionalist heraldry. Several formally trained and certified medics had been retained to be on standby to treat any injuries.

Our group followed the plan that had been predetermined and agreed upon by security personnel, and we gathered in one of the city's large parking garages forming ranks five- to six-men wide.

The energy of the moment was positively electric. Group leaders and shield-bearers led the way with several more shield-bearers guarding the flanks of the group. But almost immediately, we found ourselves surrounded on all sides by throngs of Antifa, BLM, and other leftists whose precise affiliations were unclear. They shrieked obscenities and insults and waved signs reading things like “Racism Destroys Communities. Get Rid of Monuments to Slavery,” “Sherman Did Nothing Wrong,” and “Muslims Welcome, Racists Out.”

Above, protesters gathered outside the White House to demonstrate against President Donald Trump for his supposed failure to condemn the outbreak of violence at the Charlottesville, Va. rally. What the group really should have been doing is protesting the fake media, which failed to report fairly and accurately on what the president actually did say when it came to condemning parties on each side that broke down into heated fighting as the police stood by and watched.

REUTERS/JONATHAN ERNST TFX IMAGES OF THE DAY

Within a few minutes of exiting the garage, several in our group were attacked by Antifa and BLM hooligans. A few scuffles broke out and four or five people in our party were hit with pepper spray, but the group pressed forward and filed into the park.

Rocks, balloons filled with bleach and pepper spray, and even bottles filled with putrid urine and feces were thrown at us.

During this time, numerous attempts were made to breach the shield wall with pepper spray, but any holes caused in the line by these attacks were quickly plugged.

Those not in the shield wall were scattered all throughout the park waiting for the speeches to commence, and several obvious leftists aside from the many reporters for various media outlets strolled around capturing video with smart phones and talking with others in attendance.

Throughout the duration of all this pandemonium, the police presence was rather substantial, yet not a single officer could be seen making any sort of effort to keep our two groups of protestors separated.

Although the expectation for the potential of violence was very real, the general consensus had been that the previous police success at preventing anyone from getting hurt at a recent nationalist rally in Pikeville, Ky. was to be used as a template for how to keep the event at Charlottesville under control.

About 30 minutes before the speeches were scheduled to commence, a police officer began yelling through a bullhorn to the crowd, announcing that the event had been declared an unlawful assembly and all present were to disperse or be arrested.

After several minutes of this, a large number of riot police began to form up at the base of the statue of Lee in a tight shield wall and began slowly advancing toward our group. No reasons were stated for this sudden development, and if the goal in all of this was to handle a situation that was perceived to be spiraling out of control, the conduct of the police can only be described as reckless and reactionary.

While this reporter is no expert on riot-control protocol, common sense would dictate that if a protest event is becoming too violent to manage, shoving one group of protesters into another that had been assaulting them without creating any kind of an exit for anyone to disperse or without dispersing the group blocking the exit first would be insane, not to mention a sure-fire way to recklessly endanger everyone involved. Yet this is precisely what Charlottesville's finest were doing, after having ignored the violence ensuing prior to the demand to leave.

Numerous scuffles broke out as our group was forcefully ejected from the premises. As our numbers thinned due to our members being forced out of the park, members of Antifa and BLM closed the noose tighter around us. The police seemed to be focusing all of their attention on the attendees of the rally while continuing to allow Antifa, BLM, and the rest of the leftist protestors a free hand to attack us at will.

This writer, along with a few others, narrowly squeezed past the mob as they lashed out and tried to pummel us once the police had pushed us out of the park entrance into the hostile counter-protesters.

In the confusion that followed, it was impossible to ascertain who wound up where, but that our group had been scattered around the vicinity into smaller parties was certain.

We trekked a few miles across the city and made our way to McIntire Park, the site of the so-called "free speech zone" that had been set up by the city. Our progress was slowed substantially, however, by our having to administer aid to a wounded league member who had received a rather nasty blow to the side of his head.

Shortly after arriving at this location we received word that Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe had declared a state of emergency, that the National Guard was being deployed, and that members of our group who had already reached McIntire Park were being arrested by police.

It was clear at this point that no further peaceful activism was going to be conducted that day, and so the remainder of the time was spent making contact with and shuttling out of the city the rest of the rally attendees who had not yet been able to procure transportation for themselves.

That the Unite the Right rally was assaulted by leftists and violently dispersed by the police is quite clear. Yet a number of burning questions still remain:

- Why did the police not separate the two opposing groups of protestors, especially when it was known ahead of time that BLM and Antifa, who a growing number of Americans and elected officials regard as violent terrorist organizations, would be showing up to counterprotest?

- Why were the police standing down and giving violent Antifa and BLM activists a free hand to assault Unite the Right attendees at will?

- Why was nothing being done to break up the ensuing scuffles prior to the declaration that the rally was an unlawful assembly?

- If that declaration was in the interest of restoring order, why was no effort made to open up an avenue of exit through which attendees could safely evacuate without further violence?

- Why was a state of emergency declared so quickly when the police simply doing their jobs would have been more than enough to maintain order?

What is unprecedented about all of this, in this writer's estimation, is the extent to which officialdom and the press is now in flagrant collusion with left-wing terrorists and extremists. The violent shutdown of the Unite the Right rally in Charlottesville has inaugurated a new day of infamy in American history, a day in which the left and its legions of extremists aided and abetted by the government of Charlottesville, the state of Virginia, and every major news network arrayed themselves against what was to be a peaceful protest to defend a monument.

But in a time where little more than his own white skin is sufficient to condemn a man, such heavy-handed tactics and criminal shenanigans from the left show far more potential to awaken a sleeping giant than to demoralize it to the point of submission, as was evidently hoped such a show of force would accomplish. ★

Radical Vice Mayor Played Part in Instigating Violence at Rally

• Wes Bellamy openly displays appalling level of racism

By John Friend

Dr. Wes Bellamy, the controversial and outspoken vice mayor of Charlottesville, Va., who has played a leading role in efforts to remove an iconic statue of Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee from a local city park, has a history of publishing anti-white, homophobic, and sexually degenerate messages on his social media profiles, it has been revealed.

Bellamy, originally from Atlanta, Ga., is the youngest individual ever to have been elected to the Charlottesville City Council. A vocal critic of what he regularly referred to as “white supremacists” and “bigots” who legally organized a rally recently to protest the proposed removal of the Lee monument, Bellamy moved to Charlottesville in 2009 after graduating from South Carolina State University. Bellamy worked as a community organizer and advocate for black and other “disadvantaged” youth before pursuing a career as a teacher. He received a master’s degree in education in 2014 and, earlier this year, received his doctorate at Virginia State University. In 2016, Bellamy was appointed to the Commonwealth of Virginia State Board of Education before being forced to resign roughly one year later due to public outcry when his incendiary social media posts were exposed.

Late last year, Jason Kessler, a local Charlottesville activist and a leading organizer of the Unite the Right rally, which brought together various conservative, pro-Confederate South activists, white nationalists, and alt-right leaders, organizations, and groups to protest the pending removal of the Lee monument, dug up and publicized a number of Bellamy’s tweets in an effort to expose the vice mayor as a hypocrite, misogynist, and bigot.

Bellamy posted a number of tweets on his personal Twitter profile containing degenerate and highly sexual statements. He also posted tweets expressing contempt and outright hatred for whites. In one tweet, Bellamy referred to white women as “devils” and in another explicitly stated that he did not like white people.

“The funniest thing about being down south is seeing little white men and the look on their faces when they have to look up to you,” Bellamy condescendingly tweeted on October 13, 2012.

Following the controversy, Bellamy not only resigned from the Board of Education but was also placed on administrative leave by Albemarle County Public Schools. Bellamy had been working as a computer science teacher at Albemarle High School and was involved in a youth mentoring program and boxing club.

president of 100 Black Men of Central Virginia, advises the Collegiate 100 Black Men of Central Virginia, and serves as co-chair of the Charlottesville Alliance for Black Male Achievement.

Despite the controversy surrounding his incendiary and “politically incorrect” social media posts, Bellamy still currently serves as the vice mayor of Charlottesville and remains involved with a number of local committees and organizations, including the Charlottesville Redevelopment and Housing Authority Board and the Charlottesville Police Citizens Advisory Panel, according to his profile and biography published on the city’s website.

When all of this was exposed late last year, Bellamy publicly acknowledged the tweets and apologized. “I sincerely apologize for the inappropriate things I posted to social media many years ago,” Bellamy stated on his personal Facebook page. “Elected officials should be held to a higher standard, and while I was not in office at the time, in this instance I came up short of the man I aspire to be.”

Bellamy has been criticized for his role in the city’s response to the Unite the Right rally, which took place on Aug. 12. The rally, a legally permitted event that was upheld in a federal court after city officials attempted to illegally shut it down in the days leading up to the event, was attended by hundreds of individuals and organizations. It has been alleged that police were told to stand down as the violence escalated. When they were ordered to take action, they were told to push Unite the Right rally attendees and violent counterprotesters together, making an already volatile situation even worse. ★

Gladio Meets Cointelpro in Charlottesville, Virginia

• Why and how the Deep State silences alternative voices

By Kevin Barrett

America's liberal controlled media is blaming violence in Charlottesville on the so-called alt-right. According to the dominant narrative, crazed neo-Nazi hooligans descended on a quiet college town and started beating people up and running people over. But when a violent, galvanizing, media-hyped event occurs, and the mainstream immediately tells us who to blame, I immediately think of 9/11 and all the other false-flag outrages that have done so much damage to our country.

As I wrote in the immediate aftermath of the Charlottesville clashes:

"The recent ultraviolence in Charlottesville bears some of the hallmarks of a contrived event: It was shocking, spectacular, hyped by mainstream media, and seemingly designed to cast blame on a demonized 'other' (in this case, the alt-right white nationalist movement). Additionally, it could be seen as furthering a 'strategy of tension' pitting left against right, multiculturalism against racial nationalism, Bernie Sanders extremists against Donald Trump extremists, and so on."

Deep-state operations designed to polarize societies pursue a "strategy of tension." They manipulate public opinion by making their opponents, whether on the left or the right, look like violent, dangerous extremists.

Operation Gladio,* a Pentagon program run through NATO, pursued this "strategy of tension" in Cold War-era Europe. Infiltrating and manipulating both right-wing and left-wing groups, deep-state operators incited terrorism and violence, thereby discrediting opposition to NATO-bankster rule and frightening voters into supporting the establishment.

Swiss professor Daniele Ganser and other researchers have shown that virtually all of the "left-wing terrorism" in Europe during the 1960s, 1970s, and early 1980s was actually perpetrated by Operation Gladio. Likewise, most "right-wing violence" was also a Gladio product.

Could Cointelpro, a domestic U.S. equivalent of Operation Gladio, be infiltrating both white nationalist groups and their "Antifa" opposition? Undoubtedly. Could deep-state operators be fomenting violence in an effort to discredit populism? Quite possibly.

The 2016 presidential elections delivered a slap to the face of America's deep-state elite. Left-wing populist Bernie Sanders trounced Hillary Clinton in the Democratic primary and could only be kept out of the White House through election fraud. Right-wing populist Donald Trump won an overwhelming, fraud-proof victory in the Republican primaries, then defied polls and pundits by winning the general election.

Populism is surging. Elites are panicking. The mainstream media's stranglehold over public opinion is eroding.

America's self-appointed platonic guardians are scrambling to adjust to the new reality. They appear to be resorting to ever-more-extreme measures in a desperate effort to shore up their dominance.

Their primary target is free speech on the Internet. The Trump-Sanders phenomenon was the result of 15 years of alternative media chipping away at consensus reality in general and the official story of 9/11 in particular. A deep sentiment of mistrust now pervades the populace.

The platonic guardians and the Deep State they rule are desperately seeking ways to muzzle Internet-based alternative media. During the past several months, their pet CIA search engine, Google, has been systematically tweaked in an effort to hide alternative news websites from the general public. This has resulted in a 60% decline in readership for such truth-telling websites as GlobalResearch.ca. The Deep State is also trying to cut truth-tellers' financial lifelines by such means as removing AFP's credit card processing capabilities, nuking my GoFundMe platform, orchestrating the suspension of truth-seeking academi-

To market their war on free speech, the Deep State must convince everyone that the Internet is awash with dangerous extremists.

cians like Professor Anthony Hall and Joy Kargaga from universities, banning history books from Amazon, removing alternative media from YouTube advertising programs, and otherwise trying to starve truth-seekers into submission.

But these attacks on alternative media can only be effective to the extent that public opinion acquiesces. To overcome America's traditional affinity for free speech, as enshrined in the Bill of Rights, the Deep State needs to convince the public that the Internet is populated by dangerous, violent extremists who must be muzzled in the name of public safety and "homeland security."

And that is where events like Charlottesville come in. Observers have noted that heavily militarized police and National Guard units initially showed up in force—then conveniently disappeared just before the violence was incited.

And why were demonstrators allowed to carry weapons? Normally police prevent marchers from carrying objects that could be used as fighting implements. Yet Charlottesville demonstrators carried pepper spray, clubs, weaponizable torches, helmets, riot shields, and so on.

Finally, why does big media obsessively focus on certain self-appointed "leaders" who do everything they can to make the alt-right look bad?

Could the people who benefit the most from "populist" violence—the anti-populist elite—be up to their usual tricks? ★

Yellow Journalism, White Supremacism

• Fake news media firing on all cylinders to twist what really happened in Virginia

By Dave Gahary

If anyone still requires proof that the mainstream media—and the liberal political establishment—is actively setting a liberal agenda, all one needs do is look to Charlottesville. In fact, the fake news media's game plan was on vivid display for all to see—and analyze—if one took the time. What started out as a legal gathering to protest the removal of a Confederate war hero's statue, a vital and significant part of this country's history and heritage, progressed to calls to censure President Donald Trump's measured response to the violence that the corporate media whipped up.

First, the fake news media described those peacefully protesting the removal of a Robert E. Lee statue from a park in Charlottesville, Va. as “white nationalists,” which was wholly inaccurate, as they had clearly never conducted any research into determining who was actually attending the rally. Then, after a car plowed into those protesting the “white nationalists,” the fake news media branded the driver—and all marchers—as “white supremacists.” And they stuck with that description. The “counter-protestors” were now renamed “anti-racists,” and the monolith that is the mainstream media used these terms exclusively.

When a Bell 407 helicopter crashed, carrying two Virginia State Police officers near Charlottesville, the fake news media upped the death toll from the rally to three, from the one killed by the car, and ran with that story from then on.

Most reports claiming “three deaths from the protest” failed to mention what The Washington Post has reported: that the chopper had finished surveillance of the rally “and was en route to provide air support for the motorcade of Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe (D) when it crashed.” They also conveniently failed to mention that same helicopter had crashed in 2010, when the pilots “heard an ‘unusual noise’ from the engine compartment about seven minutes into the flight” and “a louder noise . . . before it lost power and crashed.” Curiously, National Transportation Safety Board “[i]nvestigators could not determine why the helicopter was sent to a facility that was not authorized to do the necessary work.”

Perhaps most disturbing about the way the fake—and dangerous—news media developed this story to their liking is their treatment of the president, who had the courage to say that both groups—the “white supremacists” and the “anti-racists”—had blame to share. This was way too much for our media masters to swallow, and their attacks on the president have been ceaseless.

A press conference the president gave in New York on Aug. 15 starkly illustrates the craven way

More power to the people who showed up to exercise their free speech rights in Charlottesville without resorting to violence. Whether you agree with them or not, peaceful public demonstration of varying viewpoints is the essence of what makes America different from so many other nations in the world. Unfortunately, the controlled media has gotten far too involved in supporting one agenda or another, instead of simply reporting the news as unbiased observers. They also bear some responsibility for the violence.

the combative fake news media makes news, when ABC News reporter Mary Bruce challenged Trump, asking, “Mr. President, are you putting what you’re calling the alt-left and white supremacists on the same moral plane?”

Below is the president's response and the exchange that followed, in which he handled himself masterfully:

Trump: I am not putting anybody on a moral plane. What I'm saying is this: You had a group on one side and you had a group on the other, and they came at each other with clubs and it was vicious. . . . But there is another side. There was a group on this side . . . you've just called them the left—that came violently attacking the other group. So you can say what you want, but that's the way it is.

ABC News Reporter: You said there was hatred and violence on both sides?

Trump: I do think there is blame—yes, I think there is blame on both sides . . . and I have no doubt about it, and you don't have any doubt about it either. And if you reported it accurately, you would say it. . . .

George Washington was a slave-owner. Was George Washington a slave-owner? So will George Washington now lose his status—are we going to take down . . . statues of George Washington? How about Thomas Jefferson? What do you think of Thomas Jefferson? You like him? Okay, good. Are we going to take down [his] statue because he was a major slave-owner? Now we're going to take down his statue. . . . You're changing history, you're changing culture. And you had people, and I'm not talking about the neo-nazis or the white nationalists because they should be condemned totally. But you had many people in that group other than neo-nazis and white nationalists, okay? And the press has treated them absolutely unfairly.

Now, in the other group also, you had some fine people, but you also had troublemakers, and you see them come with the black outfits and with the helmets and with the baseball bats. You've got a lot of bad people in the other group, too.

“You said the press has treated white nationalists unfairly,” pestered another fake news media “reporter.” Trump responded: “. . . You had a lot of people in that group that were there to innocently protest—and very legally protest—because, I don't know if you know, they had a permit; the other group didn't have a permit. . . . There are two sides to a story.” ★

Antifa Goes to War

• If controlled media were telling truth, they'd admit BLM, Antifa are terrorists

By John Friend

The radical left-wing coalition of anti-racist, anti-fascist, anarchist, and communist activists and revolutionaries known collectively as “Antifa” is quickly becoming a household name in America. This has particularly been the case since the heated 2016 presidential election, which saw numerous Antifa factions across the country regularly disrupt Trump rallies and other conservative or right-wing events in an effort to shut down rallies and events organized by conservatives and violate the First Amendment rights of supporters of Donald Trump.

Antifa groups often directly confronted and in some cases violently assaulted Trump supporters and other conservatives at rallies and other public events throughout the election season, including at Trump’s inauguration earlier this year and most recently at a major Trump rally and speech in Phoenix, Ariz. Protests organized by Antifa groups and other radical leftists such as Black Lives Matter often devolve into violence, rioting, and looting.

Despite highly distorted and extremely biased media coverage of Antifa, countless Americans have become incensed with the antics and outright violence perpetrated by these fanatical left-wing activists across the United States. Numerous petition campaigns have been organized and publicized, including a recent one at Whitehouse.gov that has garnered nearly 289,000 signatures as this newspaper goes to press, with the goal of having the government declare Antifa a terrorist organization. In the wake of the highly publicized Unite the Right rally, which sought to bring together and unify the various right-wing leaders, organizations, and factions, the spotlight on Antifa is becoming more focused as its members openly and proudly call for and engage in violence against their right-wing political opponents.

The rally, organized primarily by Jason Kessler,

Despite the unending glorification of the leftists protesting “racism” and “supremacism” in Charlottesville, the truth remains that Antifa and Black Lives Matter (BLM) are terrorist groups responsible for vicious, physical attacks on white people, Trump supporters, police officers and other good Americans. It goes without saying that many people protesting the Unite the Right (UTR) rally in Charlottesville were not violent thugs. Above, however, we see a masked BLM thug trying to seriously maim a UTR marcher.

federal judge who insisted local authorities were infringing on Kessler’s First Amendment rights by attempting to shut down or move the scheduled rally to an alternative location in the days leading up to the event, local and state authorities prevailed in shutting it down on the day it was scheduled to take place just prior to the rally starting.

A state of emergency was declared by Virginia’s governor, and the alt-right factions who showed up at the rally were ordered to disband and leave the city, while Antifa and other leftist protesters es-a local activist, blogger, and political organizer in Charlottesville, Va., generated worldwide media coverage and has served as a justification for a tyrannical, communist-style crackdown on right-wing political dissidents and organizations by various government and law enforcement agencies, major Internet and social media companies, and online payment processors such as PayPal.

Although Kessler and other organizers of the Unite the Right rally successfully obtained a permit to hold the event, which was upheld by a

What Soldiers Do: Sex and the American GI in WWII France

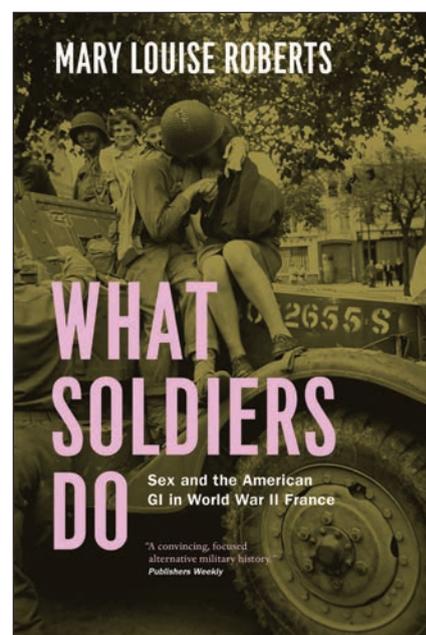

By Mary Louise Roberts

Ignore the lascivious subtitle: This is a serious book about how a conquering army—even if it be one of your “allies”—treats the host population, especially its womenfolk.

How do you convince men to charge across heavily mined beaches into deadly machine-gun fire? Do you appeal to their bonds with their fellow soldiers, their patriotism, their desire to end tyranny and mass murder? Certainly, but if you’re the U.S. Army in 1944, you also try another tack: You dangle the lure of beautiful French women, waiting just on the other side of the wire, ready to reward their liberators in so many ways.

That’s not the picture of the Greatest Generation that we’ve been given, but it’s the one Roberts paints to devastating effect in What Soldiers Do. Drawing on an incredible range of sources, including news reports, propaganda and training materials, official planning documents, wartime diaries, and memoirs, Roberts tells the fascinating and troubling story of how the U.S. military command systematically spread—and then exploited—the myth of French women as sexually experienced and available. The resulting chaos—ranging from flagrant public acts with prostitutes to outright rape and rampant venereal disease—horrified the war-weary and demoralized French population. The sexual predation, and the blithe response of the American military leadership, also caused serious friction between the two nations just as they were attempting to settle questions of control over the liberated territories and the restoration of French sovereignty.

While never denying the achievement of D-Day, or the bravery of the soldiers who took part, What Soldiers Do reminds us that history is always more useful—and more interesting—when it is most honest, and when it goes beyond the burnished beauty of nostalgia to grapple with the real lives and real mistakes of the people who lived it.

entially took over the streets and violently confronted the right-wing rally attendees who were trying to obey police orders to leave. Countless fights and other scuffles broke out in Charlottesville as a direct result of the actions taken by local and state political and law enforcement authorities.

The overall media narrative emanating from Charlottesville was and largely remains that the right-wing factions who organized and attended the rally engaged in violence and terrorism against the Antifa and leftist protesters, an absurd narrative that is almost the exact opposite of what truly transpired that day. (See pages 10-12 of this issue.)

The New York Times, one of the most establishment-serving fake news outlets in the country, interviewed a number of prominent Antifa organizers and activists in the wake of the rally, and many of them openly boasted of their intent to continue to violently confront “racists” and “white supremacists” in an effort to advance their political objectives. Antifa members argue that the burgeoning alt-right and conservative populist movements, which they view as being fueled and endorsed by the Trump administration, need to be physically confronted.

“People are starting to understand that neo-nazis don’t care if you’re quiet, you’re peaceful,” Emily Rose Nauert, a delusional young Antifa member based in California, explained to the Times. “You need violence in order to protect nonviolence. That’s what’s very obviously necessary right now. It’s full-on war, basically.”

Other Antifa activists interviewed in the article bizarrely contended that even allowing right-wing activists to organize and hold rallies and public events amounts to a form of violence that requires equally violent countermeasures.

“When you look at this grave and dangerous threat—and the violence it has already caused—is it more dangerous to do nothing and tolerate it, or should we confront it?” Frank Sabate, yet another fanatical Antifa activist, asked the Times rhetorically. “Their existence itself is violent and dangerous, so I don’t think using force or violence to oppose them is unethical.”

Some Antifa members said they would be willing to escalate the violence into all-out shootouts.

“I hope we never get there,” 29-year-old Antifa anarchist “Tony Hooligan” told the Times. “But we are willing to get there.”

Suffice it to say, Antifa members and their fake-news media enablers, along with major globalists who fund their operations, such as the plutocratic, nation-wrecking billionaire George Soros, are entirely disconnected from reality. It is Trump supporters and other right-wingers who are being violently confronted and attacked by the left—not the other way around. ★

Destroying Monuments Solves Nothing

• Like the Taliban in the Mideast, culture destroyers trying to erase history in America

By Patrick J. Buchanan

“They had found a leader, Robert E. Lee—and what a leader! . . . No military leader since Napoleon has aroused such enthusiastic devotion among troops as did Lee when he reviewed them on his horse Traveller.” So wrote Samuel Eliot Morison in his magisterial The Oxford History of the American People in 1965.

First in his class at West Point, hero of the Mexican War, Lee was the man to whom President Lincoln turned to lead his army. But when Virginia seceded, Lee would not lift up his sword against his own people, and chose to defend his home state rather than wage war upon her.

This veneration of Lee, wrote Richard Weaver, “appears in the saying attributed to a Confederate soldier, ‘The rest of us may have . . . descended from monkeys, but it took a God to make Marse Robert.’”

Growing up after World War II, this was accepted history. Yet, on the militant left today, the name Lee evokes raw hatred and howls of “racist and traitor.” A clamor has arisen to have all statues of him and all Confederate soldiers and statesmen pulled down from their pedestals and put in museums or tossed onto trash piles.

What has changed since 1965? It is not history. There have been no great new discoveries about Lee. What has changed is America herself. She is not the same country. We have passed through a Culture destroyers have been on a rampage in America, much like Islamic State terrorists have been in the Mideast for the past few years. They believe that destroying the past changes the truth. great social, cultural, and moral revolution that has left us irretrievably divided on separate shores. And the politicians are in panic.

Two years ago, Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe called the giant statues of Lee and “Stonewall” Jackson on Richmond’s Monument Avenue “parts of our heritage.” After Charlottesville, New York-born-and-bred McAuliffe, entertaining higher ambitions, went full scalawag, demanding the statues be pulled down as “flashpoints for hatred, division, and violence.”

Who hates the statues, Terry? Who’s going to cause the violence? Answer: The Democratic left whom Terry must now appease. McAuliffe is echoed by Lt. Gov. Ralph Northam, the Democratic candidate in November to succeed McAuliffe. GOP nominee Ed Gillespie wants Monument Avenue left alone. The election is the place to decide this, but the left will not wait.

In Durham, N.C., our Taliban smashed the statue of a Confederate soldier. Near the entrance of Duke University Chapel, a statue of Lee has been defaced, the nose broken off.

Wednesday at dawn, Baltimore carried out a cultural cleansing by taking down statues of Lee and Maryland Chief Justice Roger Taney who wrote the Dred Scott decision and opposed Lincoln’s suspension of the right of habeas corpus. Like ISIS, which smashed the storied ruins of Palmyra, and the al Qaeda rebels who ravaged the fabled Saharan city of Timbuktu, the new barbarism has come to America. This is going to become a blazing issue, not only between but within the parties.

For there are 10 Confederates in Statuary Hall in the Capitol, among them Lee, Georgia’s Alexander Stephens, vice president to Jefferson Davis, and

Christmas Before Christianity

How the Birthday of the Sun Became the Birthday of the Son

Find out the truth behind why Jesus, Paul, and John, as well as many of the Church Fathers held that both Christ and His Church have existed from the beginning of time. This sensational 300-page work will not only provoke discussion, but will also inspire a renewed appreciation for both the religion of our Lord and for the sacred annual celebration of His birth. It’s no secret that Christianity did what all religions do. It evolved, growing from pagan roots and, even after having established its own identity as a stream of religious culture, continued to appropriate from surrounding and established pagan belief systems.

Even the most orthodox Christian theologians and fundamentalists admit that Jesus’s exact birth date is unknown. But it is hard to believe that “there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night,” as Luke tells us, when the weather would not have permitted it in December. Why then is His birthday observed between late December and early January around the world? As award-winning author and Bible scholar Lochlainn Seabrook reveals in this fascinating and exhaustively researched work, the answer is to be found in the Goddess-based vegetation religions of prehistory and their astrological reverence for our neighborhood star, the Sun.

Ten years in the making, Christmas Before Christianity explores the pre-Christian foundations of humanity’s most popular holiday, including the many pagan gods, god-esses, myths, rituals, legends, ceremonies, customs and beliefs that contributed to its creation and development. Special emphasis is placed on ancient Egypt, where a majority of our modern Christmas traditions can be traced.

From every major facet of the Nativity to the décor and traditions of Christmas celebrations, paganism permeates the Christian tradition and His messianic birthday celebration. Even Santa Claus and St. Nicholas were Christianizations of pagan ideas. Seabrook also discloses pagan-rooted celebrations practiced around the globe today.

But Christmas celebrations were not always so well received. Fourth-century church father Origen strenuously opposed the holiday exactly because of its pagan roots. He believed there were far too many obvious pagan rituals being incorporated into Christian celebrations. You’ll learn about that, too—and more.

Antifa, BLM Behave Like Islamic State Terrorists

Shown are the ancient remains of the Temple of Bel's Cella in Palmyra, Syria, which was blown up by terrorists from the Islamic State (ISIS). Is there a difference between ISIS and the Antifa/Black Lives Matter radicals destroying cultural monuments across America? Not that we can readily discern.

JOSEPH EID/AFP/GETTY IMAGES

Davis himself. The Black Caucus wants them gone. Mount Rushmore-sized carvings of Lee, Jackson, and Davis are on Stone Mountain, Ga. Are they to be blasted off?

There are countless universities, colleges, and high schools like Washington & Lee named for Confederate statesmen and soldiers. Across the Potomac from D.C. are Jefferson Davis Highway and Leesburg Pike to Leesburg itself, 25 miles north. Are all highways, streets, towns, and counties named for Confederates to be renamed? What about Fort Bragg?

On every Civil War battlefield, there are monuments to the Southern fallen. Gettysburg has hundreds of memorials, statues and markers. But if, as the left insists we accept, the Confederates were traitors trying to tear America apart to preserve an evil system, upon what ground do Democrats stand to resist the radical left's demands?

What do we do with those battlefields where Confederates were victorious: Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville? "Where does this all end?" President Donald Trump asked.

It doesn't. Not until America's histories and biographies are burned and new texts written to nazify Lee, Jackson, Davis, and all the rest, will a newly indoctrinated generation of Americans accede to this demand to tear down and destroy what their fathers cherished.

And once all the Confederates are gone, one must begin with the explorers, and then the slave owners like President Washington, President Jefferson, and President Madison, who seceded from slave-free Britain. White supremacists all. Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay of Kentucky, and John Calhoun must swiftly follow.

Then there are all those segregationists. From 1865 to 1965, virtually all of the great Southern senators were white supremacists.

In the first half of the 20th century, Woodrow Wilson and FDR carried all 11 states of a rigidly segregationist South all six times they ran, and FDR rewarded Dixie by putting a Klansman on the Supreme Court.

While it's easy for Republicans to wash their hands of such odious elements as "Nazis" in Charlottesville, will they take up the defense of the monuments and statues that have defined our history, or capitulate to the icon-smashers?

In this Second American Civil War, whose side are you on? ★

Erasing Dissenting Opinions

• World's biggest tech companies collude to control freedom of speech

By John Friend

Some of the world's top technology and social media companies have increased their already full-scale assault on conservative and other right-wing political dissidents and organizations in the wake of the Unite the Right rally in Charlottesville, Va., which took place two weeks ago. The event was organized and promoted by some of the leading figures in the conservative, alt-right, and white nationalist communities, and became the scene of mob violence and mayhem that shocked the country.

The event, designed to protest the removal of a statue commemorating Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee as well as to unite the various factions of the flourishing and increasingly popular alt-right movement, was organized largely by Jason Kessler, a local activist, blogger, and community organizer in Charlottesville. Kessler and his supporters obtained a legal permit to hold the rally, overcoming numerous obstacles placed in their way by local political leaders, including the mayor of Charlottesville and its city council.

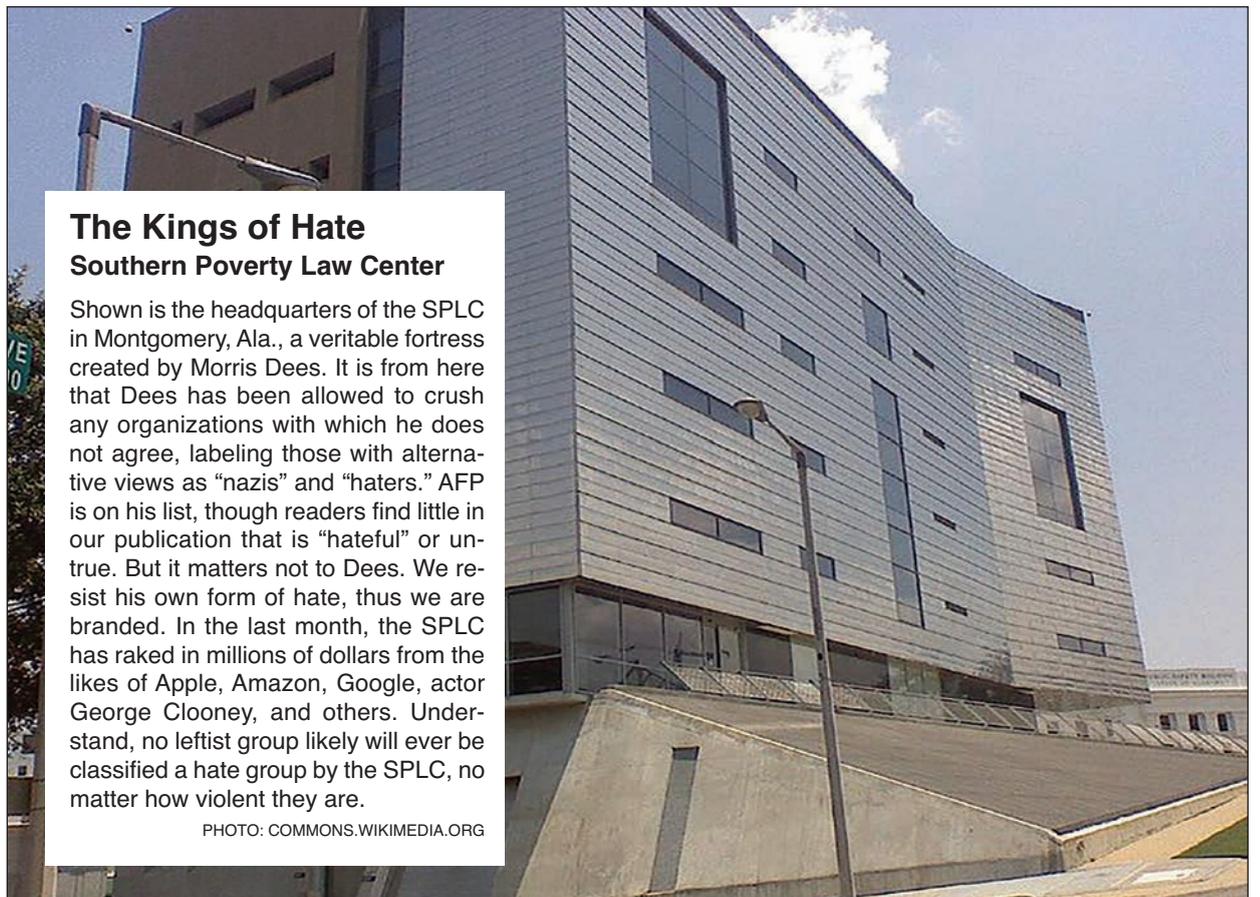

Unfortunately, the rally was a total disaster for Kessler and other participants of the Unite the Right rally, as Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe declared a state of emergency and local and state law enforcement officials shut down the event. Then, Unite the Right attendees were forced by law enforcement officials into the throngs of counter-protesters to ensure a violent confrontation would take place. This was obviously orchestrated by Virginia officials.

The narrative of the event emanating from the fake news media portrayed the organizers and attendees of the Unite the Right rally as violent, unhinged white supremacists, racists, Klansmen, and neo-nazis who were responsible for the violence and mayhem in Charlottesville. Leading leftist activist organizations, including the Southern Poverty Law Center and Anti-Defamation League, media pundits across the country, and virtually the entire political establishment condemned the alt-right, blaming its adherents and activists as the instigators and initiators of the violent melee.

Nothing could be further from the truth, as this newspaper has expertly detailed in this week's edition.

The Unite the Right rally drew international attention and remains the focus of much media coverage. Major social media and other high-tech companies centered in Silicon Valley began targeting many of the most prominent alt-right activists and organizations in the wake of the event, banning them from their services, forcing them offline, and removing them from Internet search results.

Shown is the headquarters of the SPLC in Montgomery, Ala., a veritable fortress created by Morris Dees. It is from here that Dees has been allowed to crush any organizations with which he does not agree, labeling those with alternative views as “nazis” and “haters.” AFP is on his list, though readers find little in our publication that is “hateful” or untrue. But it matters not to Dees. We resist his own form of hate, thus we are branded. In the last month, the SPLC has raked in millions of dollars from the likes of Apple, Amazon, Google, actor George Clooney, and others. Understand, no leftist group likely will ever be classified a hate group by the SPLC, no matter how violent they are.

versial Daily Stormer—one of the top far-right websites in the world—has essentially been forced off the Internet, as the domain for his website was seized from him by GoDaddy, a leading website registration company.

As AFP goes to press, Anglin has successfully set up a new domain for the Daily Stormer, www.punishedstormer.com. It remains unclear if the site will stay online.

Leading figures in the alt-right, including Richard Spencer and Jared Taylor, have been censored by a variety of social media and tech companies. Numerous individuals associated with the alt-right have been banned from Twitter, Facebook, and YouTube and have had their PayPal accounts permanently limited.

“Doofuses say it’s only censorship if the government does it,” Richard Spencer recently explained. “YouTube and Twitter and Facebook have more power than the government. If you can’t host a website or tweet, then you effectively don’t have a right to free speech.”

Spencer went on to argue that “social networks need to be regulated in the way the broadcast networks are.” The top tech companies dominating the Internet and social media—Twitter, Facebook, and Google, for example—should be viewed as public utilities, Spencer contends. “We should start conceiving of these things as utilities and not in terms of private companies,” he stated.

Not all tech companies are caving, though. Gab.ai, an alternative to Twitter, has become increasingly more popular as right-wing dissidents are forced off of Twitter, Facebook, and other social media outlets. Gab.ai is a staunch supporter of free speech, at least for the time being. Other tech companies have also been launched in recent years in the wake of leftist censorship of right-wing dissidents.

As readers of this newspaper know full well, political dissidents and publications challenging the fake news media and its leftist, anti-white narratives have been facing enormous challenges operating and publishing on the Internet.

The assault on the First Amendment rights of those of us opposing political correctness, speaking and publishing openly and frankly about some of the most controversial issues facing our world, and challenging commonly accepted historical and contemporary narratives promoted by the fake news media and political establishment could not be more obvious.

The very concept of free speech, free historical and intellectual inquiry, and the First Amendment remain in limbo in the aftermath of the Unite the Right rally in Charlottesville.

The tyrannical, communist-style crackdown on any form of right-wing political dissident could not be more evident. ★

AFP Attends Conference for Wounded U.S. Veterans

• Liberty survivor Tourney, disabled vet Gahary given award

By Dave Gahary

DALLAS, Texas—The Military Order of the Purple Heart (MOPH) national convention took place in “Big D” from Aug. 12-18, and AMERICAN FREE PRESS was in attendance. In fact, this writer and USS Liberty survivor Phil Tourney were invited to the 85th annual meeting to make a presentation to the veterans about the USS Liberty Film Project both men are promoting.

The significance of speaking to such a large group cannot be overstated. Never before in the more than 50 years since the massacre of 34 and wounding of 174 Americans on the high seas in international waters by the Zionist state of Israel has the story of the Liberty been allowed to be told to such a mainstream audience. Prior to this, this newspaper’s precursor, The Spotlight, was the only entity to draw as much attention to the Liberty massacre.

The congressionally chartered MOPH has over 45,000 members, who have received the Purple Heart award while serving in the U.S. armed forces.

Significantly, in order to be eligible for membership in the MOPH, an individual must be “of good moral character” and have “received the Purple Heart for wounds . . . against an armed enemy of the United States.” The men aboard the Liberty on the day of the massacre, June 8, 1967, received 208 Purple Hearts, clearly placing Israel in the “enemy” camp.

Those present during the Liberty presentation—around 300—listened attentively and gave a standing ovation, as well as heartily supporting the movie project, an attempt to get the story of the massacre on video, via a full-length feature film, to finally mass-educate the world about the most decorated ship in U.S. Navy history for a single engagement.

This reporter and his partner in the project received a plaque from the MOPH in recognition for the work we have done for veterans, quite an honor, we both agreed. It read, in part, “In appreciation of your commitment and continuous support of veterans.”

Besides being afforded the great opportunity to speak in front of the MOPH, a presentation was offered in front of the Ladies Auxiliary of the MOPH (LAMOPH), the MOPH’s sister organization, consisting of “mothers, wives, sisters, widows, daughters, stepdaughters, granddaughters and legally adopted female lineal descendants of Purple Heart recipients, who may or may not be MOPH members themselves.” Although it is a wholly separate organization from the MOPH, LAMOPH shares the same goals and mission, and fully supported the movie project, as well as making a separate contribution to the upcoming film.

One of those present at the MOPH convention was Purple Heart recipient Walter P. Kaczmarek Jr., who was one of only three U.S. Marines to raise the American flag over Hué City in Vietnam at the capital building, when they liberated the city during the Battle of Hué, one of the bloodiest and longest battles of the Vietnam War, lasting from Jan. 30, 1968, until March 3, 1968. The significance of the battle is memorialized in a U.S. Navy ship, USS Hué City, the only U.S. Navy ship named after a battle in the Vietnam War.

Walter discussed the MOPH organization. “It’s pretty exclusive,” he began. “The only organization more exclusive is the Medal of Honor society.”

The Medal of Honor (MOH), the oldest continuously issued combat decoration of the U.S. Armed Forces, is the country’s highest and most prestigious military decoration, awarded by the president. The Liberty’s skipper, William McGonagle, had his MOH presented to him in secret at the Washington Navy Yard by the secretary of the Navy, the only time—before or since—an MOH recipient was awarded in this manner.

Walter then discussed the Liberty presentation. “They [the Navy MOPH members present in the audience] were riveted to your speech, your talk,” he said. “Sure enough, you got a standing ovation. They were very impressed. A lot of men in that room were hearing about the Liberty for the first time.”

“It’s been one of the most rewarding experiences of my life, to be around men, great heroes, who gave their blood and their limbs for this country,” added Tourney. ★

FROM COVER-UP TO CATASTROPHE

In 2013, biologist Dr. Brian Hooker received a call from a senior scientist at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) who led the agency’s 2004 study on the Measles-Mumps-Rubella (MMR) vaccine and its link to autism. The scientist, Dr. William Thompson, confessed that the CDC had omitted crucial data in their final report that revealed a causal relationship between the MMR vaccine and autism. Over several months, Dr. Hooker records the phone calls made to him by Dr. Thompson who provides the confidential data destroyed by his colleagues at the CDC.

Dr. Hooker enlisted the help of Dr. Andrew Wakefield, the British gastroenterologist falsely accused of starting the anti-vax movement when he first reported in 1998 that the MMR vaccine may cause autism. In his ongoing effort to advocate for children’s health, Wakefield directs this documentary examining the evidence behind an appalling cover-up committed by the government agency charged with protecting the health of all American citizens. Interviews with pharmaceutical insiders, doctors, politicians, and parents of vaccine-injured children reveal an alarming deception that has contributed to the skyrocketing increase of autism and potentially the most catastrophic epidemic of our lifetime. Bankers, Generals Surround Trump

• Is president's populist-nationalist, America-first policy in danger of being eclipsed?

By Patrick J. Buchanan

“I have not become the king's first minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British empire,” said Winston Churchill to cheers at the Lord Mayor's luncheon in London in November 1942. True to his word, Churchill did not begin the liquidation.

When his countrymen threw him out in July 1945, that role fell to Clement Attlee, who began the liquidation. Churchill, during his second premiership from 1951-1955, would continue the process, as would his successor, Harold Macmillan, until the greatest empire the world had ever seen had vanished.

While its demise was inevitable, the death of the empire was hastened and made more humiliating by the wars into which Churchill had helped to plunge Britain, wars that bled and bankrupted his nation. At Yalta in 1945, Stalin and FDR treated the old imperialist with something approaching bemused contempt.

War is the health of the state, but the death of empires. The German, Austro-Hungarian, Russian, and Ottoman empires all fell in World War I. World War II ended the Japanese and Italian empires—with the British and French following soon after. The Soviet empire collapsed in 1989. Afghanistan delivered the coup de grace. Is it now the turn of the Americans?

Persuaded by his generals—James Mattis at Defense, H.R. McMaster on the National Security Council, John Kelly as chief of staff—President Donald Trump is sending some 4,000 more U.S. troops to Afghanistan to augment the 8,500 already there.

Like presidents Obama and Bush, he does not intend to preside over a U.S. defeat in its longest war. Nor do his generals. Yet how can we defeat the Taliban with 13,000 troops when we failed to do so with the 100,000 Obama sent?

The new troops are to train the Afghan army to take over the war, to continue eradicating the terrorist elements like ISIS, and to prevent Kabul and other cities from falling to a Taliban now dominant in 40% of the country.

Yet what did the great general, whom Trump so admires, Douglas MacArthur, say of such a strategy? “War's very object is victory, not prolonged indecision.” Is not “prolonged indecision” what the Trump strategy promises? Is not “prolonged indecision” what the war policies of Obama and Bush produced in the last 17 years?

Understandably, Americans feel they cannot walk away from this war. For there is the certainty as to what will follow when we leave.

When the British left Delhi in 1947, millions of former subjects died during the partition of the territory into Pakistan and India and the mutual slaughter of Muslims and Hindus.

When the French departed Algeria in 1962, the “Harkis” they left behind paid the price of being loyal to the mother country.

When we abandoned our allies in South Vietnam,

THE BAD WAR The Truth NEVER Taught About WWII

After years of strong sales and hundreds of five-star ratings, Jeff Bezos at Amazon finally caved in to pressure and banned Mike King's The Bad War: The Truth Never Taught About World War 2. Why?

Americans today have an almost identical recollection of World War II as the “good war,” fought by their forebears against the “Krauts” and “Japs.” According to our mainstream history books, “the Good Guys” banded together to stop the worst scourge in global history. There is just one problem with this official version of the history-changing event known as World War II. It's a lie!

So, how much do we really know about that crucial event and the decades of complex European history preceding it? Why, and for whom, were the 20th century's worldwide wars actually waged?

Read the true version of World War II in this 8.5-by-11-inch photo-journalistic chronology of what really happened—approximately 300 of the most important events of the war briefly reinterpreted through the eyes of a Revisionist historian who eliminates the propaganda. Was the mainstream media as phony as it is now? Who was really to blame?

What about the events that happened but were never reported in the press? Or wrongly reported? Or purely fabricated?

Can we expect three generals and a Wall Street insider to carry out the president's America-first agenda when it comes to war and finance?

the result was mass murder in the streets, concentration camps, and hundreds of thousands of boat people in the South China Sea, a final resting place for many. In Cambodia, it was a holocaust.

Trump, however, was elected to end America's involvement in Middle East wars. And if he has been persuaded that he simply cannot liquidate these wars—Libya, Syria, Iraq, Yemen, Afghanistan—he will likely end up sacrificing his presidency, trying to rescue the failures of those who worked hardest to keep him out of the White House.

Consider the wars, active and potential, Trump faces. Writes Bob Merry in the fall issue of The National Interest: "War between Russia and the West seems nearly inevitable. No self-respecting nation facing inexorable encirclement by an alliance of hostile neighbors can allow such pressures and forces to continue indefinitely. Eventually (Russia) must protect its interests through military action."

If Pyongyang tests another atom bomb or ICBM, some national security aides to Trump are not ruling out preventive war. Trump himself seems hell-bent on tearing up the nuclear deal with Iran. This would lead inexorably to a U.S. ultimatum, where Iran would be expected to back down or face a war that would set the Persian Gulf ablaze. Yet U.S. voters did not cast ballots for confrontation or war.

America voted for Trump's promise to improve ties with Russia, to make Europe shoulder more of the cost of its defense, to annihilate ISIS and extricate us from Mideast wars, to stay out of future wars. America voted for economic nationalism and an end to the mammoth trade deficits with the NAFTA nations, EU, Japan, and China. America voted to halt the invasion across our southern border and to reduce legal immigration to ease the downward pressure on American wages and the competition for working-class jobs.

Yet today we hear talk of upping and extending the U.S. troop presence in Afghanistan, Iraq, and Syria, of confronting Iran, of sending anti-tank and anti-aircraft weapons to Ukraine to battle pro-Russia rebels in the east.

Can the new custodians of Trump's populist-nationalist and America-first agenda—the generals and the Goldman Sachs alumni association—be entrusted to carry it out? ★

Make War on Venezuela?

By Rep. Ron Paul

There is something unsettling about how President Donald Trump has surrounded himself with generals. From his defense secretary to his national security advisor to his White House chief of staff, Trump looks to senior military officers to fill key positions that have been customarily filled by civilians. He's surrounded by generals and threatens war at the drop of a hat.

Trump began last week by threatening "fire and fury" on North Korea. He continued through the week claiming, falsely, that Iran is violating the terms of the nuclear deal. He finally ended the week by threatening a U.S. military attack on Venezuela.

He told reporters on Friday that, "We have many options for Venezuela including a possible military option, if necessary. . . . We have troops all over the world in places that are very, very far away. Venezuela is not very far away, and the people are suffering, and they are dying."

Venezuela's defense minister called Trump's threat "an act of craziness."

Even more worrisome, when Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro tried to call Trump for clarification he was refused. The White House stated that discussions with the Venezuelan president could only take place once democracy was restored in the country. Does that mean Trump is moving toward declaring Maduro no longer the legitimate president of Venezuela? Is Trump taking a page from Obama's failed regime-change policy for Syria and declaring that "Maduro must go"?

The current unrest in Venezuela is related to the economic shortcomings of that country's centrally planned economy. The 20th century has shown us very clearly that state control over an economy leads to mismanagement, mal-investment, massive shortages, and, finally, economic collapse. That is why those of us who advocate free-market economics constantly warn that U.S. government intervention in our own economy is leading us toward a similar financial crisis.

But there is another factor in the unrest in Venezuela. For many years the U.S. government, through the CIA, the National Endowment for Democracy, and U.S. government-funded non-governmental organizations, has been trying to overthrow the Venezuelan government. They almost succeeded in 2002, when then-president Hugo Chavez was briefly driven from office. Washington has spent millions trying to manipulate Venezuela's elections and overturn the results. U.S. policy is to create unrest and then use that unrest as a pretext for U.S. intervention.

Military officers play an important role in defending the United States. Their job is to fight and win wars. But the White House is becoming the war house and the president seems to see war as a first solution rather than a last resort. His threats of military action against a Venezuela that neither threatens nor could threaten the United States suggest a shocking lack of judgment.

Congress should take Trump's threats seriously. In the 1980s, when President Ronald Reagan was determined to overthrow the Nicaraguan government using a proxy army, Congress passed a series of amendments, named after their author, Rep. Edward Boland (D-Mass.), to prohibit the president from using funds it appropriated to do so.

Congress should make it clear in a similar manner that, absent a Venezuelan attack on the United States, Trump would be committing a serious crime in ignoring the Constitution were he to follow through with his threats.

Maybe they should call it the "We're Not the World's Policeman" act. ★

THE UNQUOTABLE ABRAHAM LINCOLN

THE PRESIDENT'S QUOTES THEY DON'T WANT YOU TO KNOW!

If we're to believe the 20,000 books that have been written about President Abraham Lincoln by pro-North and New South historians, he was an ardent abolitionist, a Bible-believing Christian, and a Constitution-loving conservative who headed the most ethical administration in U.S. history, preserved the Union, ended American slavery, and became the black man's greatest champion by granting him full civil and equal rights. In fact, according to Lincoln's own words, nothing could be further from the truth. After reading the eye-opening book, The Unquotable Abraham Lincoln, by award-winning historian Col. Lochlainn Seabrook, you'll be asking yourself the question: Why then does Lincoln, a big government liberal who filled his armies with radical left-wing officers and was idolized by socialists like Marx and Engels, continue to be annually voted America's "best" president by people of all ages, races, religions, and political persuasions? The answer is that the real Lincoln has been carefully concealed from us by his faithful worshipers who will stop at nothing to keep you from learning the facts about our 16th chief executive and his unconstitutional, unnecessary, and unjustifiable war on the American people. Col. Seabrook closely examines the politically incorrect statements they don't want you to read. Included here, among some 230 footnoted entries, are Lincoln's controversial views on his presidency, the government, the U.S. Constitution, states' rights, the Union, the war, abolition, slavery, colonization, blacks, Mexicans,

"mulattos," the Confederacy, Southerners, emancipation, Jesus, the Bible, Christianity, and more. Without a true and complete understanding of Lincoln, one will never have a true and complete understanding of the conflict itself.

Trump Indicates He'll Pardon Arpaio

By Mark Anderson

President Donald Trump recently announced that he is considering pardoning former Sheriff Joe Arpaio, which would repudiate the guilty verdict handed down by federal Judge Susan Bolton in a non-jury trial that wrapped up July 6. It would not only cancel the sentencing of “America’s sheriff” that’s scheduled for Oct. 5. It also would very likely set off yet another media-induced firestorm, accusing Trump of being so beyond the pale in the view of the powers that be that even louder but misguided calls for his removal from office will be heard.

Arpaio, who’s 85, was found guilty of misdemeanor criminal contempt for defying a 2011 court order to stop patrols that targeted suspected illegal immigrants. He detained those who were here illegally and handed them over to federal custody.

In his final years of his 24-year tenure as Maricopa County sheriff, in a border state often nearly overrun by illegal immigrants, Arpaio emerged as a leading opponent for stopping illegal immigration. Thus he became someone the Barack Obama administration, the media, and the left still view with utter contempt.

Trump clarified his outlook on Aug. 13 during an interview with Fox News at his Bedminster, N.J. golf club. “I am seriously considering a pardon for Sheriff Arpaio,” said Trump. “He has done a lot in the fight against illegal immigration. He’s a great American patriot, and I hate to see [this happen] to him.”

Mark Goldman, one of Arpaio’s attorneys, told AFP on Aug. 16 that it’s hard to say for sure if and when Arpaio, a former federal Drug Enforcement Administration officer, may be pardoned.

Trump has not granted any pardons so far in his presidency. Given the nation’s hyper-sensitive atmosphere currently, Goldman declined to comment at length, adding that Arpaio is not yet at liberty to comment.

Goldman did tell AFP, though: “If Joe is pardoned, he’ll accept it. He has great respect for the president, and he hasn’t requested anything.”

Mindful that Arpaio could get six months behind bars if he’s sentenced in October, Goldman shared copies of two motions just filed in the U.S. District Court in Phoenix. One requests a new trial by jury and/or to vacate the judgment; the other seeks a judgment of acquittal.

However, Trump revisited the matter during his fiery speech in Phoenix, Ariz. on Aug. 22.

“Was Sheriff Joe convicted for doing his job?” he asked the people in the audience to raucous applause, before adding that “he’s going to be just fine, okay?”

Alluding to the pardon, Trump said, “I won’t do it tonight because I don’t want to cause any controversy. But Sheriff Joe should feel good.” ★

UFOS AND ALIENS: THE COMPLETE GUIDEBOOK

By Col. Lochlainn Seabrook

No matter what you think about the possibility of extraterrestrials, this will make a fascinating read—and it comes from one of America’s most highly respected historians, Col. Lochlainn Seabrook.

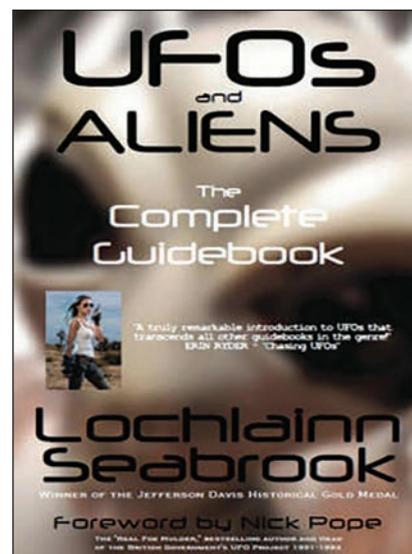

UFOS and Aliens: The Complete Guidebook is a one-of-a-kind work that’s packed with just about everything you’ll ever want to know about the possibility of extraterrestrials and their alleged craft.

Col. Seabrook writes knowledgeably, with verve and clarity, making the journey through this complex topic both entertaining and educational. Well researched, the book includes detailed eyewitness descriptions of UFOs and aliens, a history of UFO sightings, 61 real casebook studies, compelling evidence of the reality of UFOs, a list of NASA UFO images, chapters on alien abductions, crop circles, Men in Black, skeptics, becoming a ufologist and the alleged worldwide UFO coverup.

Also included are sections on suggested books, DVDs, organizations and credible websites, a UFO sighting form, a useful glossary and more. Erin Ryder of the TV series Chasing UFOs and Destination Truth calls Seabrook’s work: “A truly remarkable introduction to UFOs that transcends all other guidebooks in the genre!”

If you’re looking for something on UFOs that explains them away as weather balloons, space debris, birds, meteors, Chinese lanterns, light refractions or secret experimental aircraft, this is not the book for you. Having had his own UFO sightings, Seabrook respects his topic, writing with the enthusiasm of an open-minded believer rather than a close-minded debunker. Still, his approach is essentially scientific, a refreshing position that only adds to the academic value of this book. A complete guidebook in every sense of the word, this is a must-have for anyone—particularly those new to the subject—who is looking for an affordable book that explores all facets of the UFO phenomenon.

The foreword is by Nick Pope, known as the “Real Fox Mulder.” Pope was head of the British government’s UFO Project from 1991-1994, and author of Open Skies, Closed Minds.

Inside the Poison Papers

• Documents reveal decades of government cover-ups on toxic chemical dumps

By James Spounias

Carol Van Strum desired a simple life when she and her family moved to Oregon's idyllic Siuslaw National Forest in 1974. Little did she know that she would become a curator of information indicting powerful chemical companies and government agencies, which resulted in the creation of an online library known as the "Poison Papers," or that she would suffer personal tragedy as well.

Published by the Center for Media and Democracy and the Bioscience Resource Project, the Poison Papers lay out "a 40-year history of deceit and collusion involving the chemical industry and the regulatory agencies that were supposed to be protecting human health and the environment," according to Peter von Stackelberg, a journalist who helped establish the online collection, as reported by Sharon Lerner on the news website "TheIntercept.com."

The saga began in the 1970s when Ms. Van Strum asked U.S. Forest Service employees to stop spraying herbicides in the area of her home. In one incident, her children had been directly doused as they fished in a nearby river.

Ms. Lerner reported: "Immediately after they were sprayed, Van Strum's children developed nosebleeds, bloody diarrhea, and headaches, and many of their neighbors fell sick, too. Several women who lived in the area had miscarriages shortly after incidents of spraying. Locals described finding animals that had died or had bizarre deformities—ducks with backward-facing feet, birds with misshapen beaks, and blinded elk; cats and dogs that had been exposed began bleeding from their eyes and ears. At a community meeting, residents decided to write to the Forest Service detailing the effects of the spraying they had witnessed."

Ms. Van Strum thought, as any reasonable American would, once the agency knew how detrimental the spraying was "they wouldn't do it anymore."

She discovered that the herbicide used by the Forest Service contained an active ingredient used in Agent Orange, which even the U.S. military stopped using in Vietnam after it became known it caused serious harm to humans and the environment. Ms. Lerner reported that "between 1972 and 1977, the Forest Service sprayed 20,000 pounds of 2,4,5-T (an active ingredient in Agent Orange) in the 1,600-square-mile area that included Van Strum's house and the nearby town of Alsea."

The Forest Service refused Ms. Van Strum's request, so she, along with her neighbors, took them to court, which resulted in a victory of sorts. A tem-

Carol von Strum (left) has assembled a collection of documents that indicate criminal collusion between the agricultural establishment and the regulatory agencies that are supposed to oversee them.

Dr. Latham told Todd Zwillich on WNCY radio on July 31.

Latham said bad news doesn't travel up the agency, leaving a "closet full of skeletons," which aptly describes the Poison Papers.

For instance, a company called Industrial Bio-Test Laboratories (IBT) was responsible for up to 40% of all chemical safety tests.

Monsanto and other giants used this testing company, which got some media attention in light of a negative report issued by the Food and Drug Administration. Top bureaucrats had to "do something."

Rebekah Wilce reported on "independentsciencenews.com" that testing animals would decompose so quickly that "their bodies oozed through wire cage bottoms and lay in purple puddles on the dropping trays" and that IBT invented an acronym "TBD," later discovered to mean "too badly decomposed."

Poison Papers documents reveal a secret meeting with the EPA, Canada's Health Protection Branch, and top chemical companies on Oct. 3, 1978 at the Howard Johnson Motor Inn in Arlington, Va.

Government bureaucrats "kicked the can down the road," giving IBT a chance to resubmit studies, according to Latham. He noted that, "Meanwhile, you're not telling the public that the chemicals that they're using in their households and yards and that are in their food have unsound tests behind them. . . . In some cases, 100% of the tests were unsound."

Those who wonder what is causing so much illness, such as cancer, dementia, and other problems, may have an answer, and it lies in chemical exposure, said Latham.

The evidence continues to mount daily against big business and government.

If the words of those who poison and the bureaucrats who cover up and do nothing won't convince us we need to take action, what will? ★ porary ban was issued on the use of 2,4,5-T in 1977, and it was ultimately stopped in 1983, according to Ms. Lerner.

James Spounias is the president of Carotec Inc., originally founded by renowned radio show host and alternative health expert Tom Valentine.

"We didn't think of ourselves as environmentalists; that wasn't even a word back then. We just didn't want to be poisoned," Ms. Van Strum said.

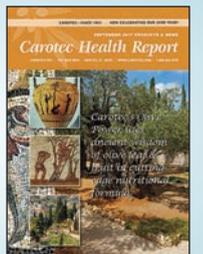

Tragically, Ms. Van Strum's four children died in a 1997 home fire, which spread suspiciously quickly and was not investigated. Ms. Lerner reported: "Firefighters who came to the scene said the fact that the whole house had burned so quickly pointed to the possibility of arson. But an investigation of the causes of the fire was never completed."

Today, Ms. Van Strum lives in an outbuilding next to the cleared area where her home once stood and has accepted the fact she will "never really know" whether foul play was involved.

Jonathan Latham, Ph.D., cofounder and director of the Bioscience Resource Project and director of the Poison Papers, explains how things got to the point where bureaucratic agencies, such as the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), don't care about the public they are charged with protecting.

When agency scientists discover wrongdoing, such as fraud by major chemical companies, they "don't do anything about it because they have to pass it up the line" to their senior administrator (and ultimately) to the president, who will have to take a stand against a toxic chemical and its producer,

Watch Out for North Korea

This AFP reader admires former Texas Rep. Ron Paul for defending the Constitution as it was originally designed by the framers in Philadelphia, and for Paul's support of a non-interventionist foreign policy outlined by President George Washington in his famous "Farewell Address."

I must, however, take strong issue with Paul's recent remarks on the Korean crisis. The saber-rattling by Marxist thug and dictator Kim Jong Un should not be ignored by the free world. President Donald Trump attempted to persuade Jong Un's sponsors in the Red Chinese government to put pressure on the North Korean leader to end their nuclear saber-rattling against the U.S. to no avail.

President Harry S. Truman did not allow Gen. Douglas MacArthur to pursue the Red Army beyond the Yalu River back into the Chinese mainland, and thus we have the Indian-government-negotiated 38th Parallel between the capitalist south and the Red north.

The late San Francisco Chronicle syndicated columnist Drew Pearson, in a column written back in 1965, had the audacity to compare Gen. George Washington to the North Vietnamese communist butcher Ho Chi Minh.

President Richard Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger attempted to negotiate with the Marxist thugs, and Vietnam, Cambodia, and most of Indochina fell to Uncle Ho's Red butchers.

Let's not make the same mistake on the Korean peninsula.

Soros Is Trump's Enemy

The notorious international "slash-and-burn" speculator George Soros has spent millions of his ill-gotten gains to finance the anti-Trump demonstrations throughout this country. But he doesn't stop there. He also has his hired thugs break up town hall meetings and pro-Trump gatherings.

The best way to judge a man's true value to society is by the enemies he has made in his life.

Seymour Hersh Is Reliable

While I have an appreciation for the offerings of Paul Craig Roberts, he does seem inclined to be overly protective of President Donald Trump. In AFP's article titled "Who Gassed Syrian Civilians?" in the July 17 & 24 issue, Seymour Hersh is reported to be critical of Trump's reasoning for the U.S. missile strike on a Syrian base.

Roberts questions the reliability of Hersh's information and source. It seems to me that Hersh's track record as an investigative reporter is excellent. I hope that AFP will continue to keep us aware of what Hersh uncovers.

By the way, I am not a Republican. I voted for Trump to keep Hillary Clinton out of office, but if the power of the presidency results in Trump becoming bellicose, this combat veteran will energetically denounce him.

Haves and Have-Nots

Texas has been colonized by illegal immigration. Hispanics are now the majority. The immigration invasion has been unmasked as a Marxist conquest. A central tenet of Marxism is to create a class struggle, the "haves" versus the "have-nots." Illegals (have-nots) get massive largess from the taxpayers (haves). They are rewarded for illegally occupying and overpopulating Texas.

Hispanic power extends to Congress and the Texas legislature due to the establishment of Hispanic caucuses. This results in legislative engineering based on race, which is unconstitutional due to equality clauses etc.

Racist caucuses are intolerable and un-American and must be abolished. Qualification for caucus membership is based on race. This caucus promotes the Hispanic agenda at the expense of other races. Illegals

Famed Black Nationalist, Comedian Passes

By John Tiffany

Dick Gregory, author, political activist, comedian, and longtime friend to AMERICAN FREE PRESS, died Aug. 21 in Washington, D.C. He was 84 and is believed to have died from complications of heart disease.

Born in St. Louis on Oct. 12, 1932, Gregory became one of the earliest black standup comedians in the 1950s, while in the military. Before long he was appearing at the Playboy Club and on late-night television and made it to 82nd place in Comedy Central's list of "The 100 Greatest Stand-ups of All Time."

A noted activist, Gregory marched with Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X. In 1967 he ran for mayor of Chicago and in 1968 for president in the Freedom and Peace Party. During the 1980 Iranian hostage crisis he went to Tehran to try to negotiate the hostages' release and engaged in a public hunger strike.

Reports on Gregory's death were published around the world, but what the establishment obituaries of this man fail to mention is that Gregory was wise to 9/11. In his own words, he said, "The way the twin towers and Building 7 fell just didn't make any sense."

Gregory began researching the anomalies that disprove the official conspiracy theory of the crimes of Sept. 11, 2001. But not until many years later did he become aware of a group of professional men who could confirm his suspicions. On Sept. 9, 2010, at a press conference held by the Architects & Engineers for 9/11 Truth group (AE911Truth), he listened as a case was laid out for controlled demolition. Gregory was so impressed he announced he would embark on a two-year solid food fast for 9/11 truth.

He believed the technical focus AE911Truth has maintained will enable it to withstand hostile scrutiny from professionals.

"The difference here is that mathematics is the same throughout the world," he said. "When architects and engineers see your research, it will make sense to them. Now those who feel inspired to share the truth with others will have talking points that are backed by hard science and expert analysis."

Gregory once told AMERICAN FREE PRESS, "9/11 is a trick. The numbers 9-1-1 [the phone number for emergencies] tell your brain to be scared."

In an interview with Victor Thorn, Gregory said: "I don't get my news from NBC anymore. Instead, I look for rips in the fabric. That's why I knew Obama would be president 10 years ago. Obama's father and mother were both CIA. Everyone that messes with him dies. I know all about that crooked guy."

If you have not previously studied the evidence that the government and mass media are lying about the events of 9/11, now would be a good time to honor the memory of Gregory by doing so. ★ are succeeding in getting priority over citizens.

The U.S. and Texas have spent billions on illegals by giving them undeserved free benefits. This does not include unfunded mandates on local governments and institutions to provide vast sums for their criminality, medicine, bilingual education etc. Illegals drain food banks and other non-profit agencies. They beget children that they do not provide for, consequently dumping them into the welfare system.

America must stop wasting billions for building a wall etc. The simple solution is to outlaw hiring illegals and stop giving them free benefits. They will leave and stop immigrating to the U.S. Otherwise, when the taxpayers (the haves) are bankrupt and can no longer provide everything free to illegals (have-nots), the result will be Bolshevik-style revolutionary anarchism. This is the ultimate goal of Marxist class struggle.

Man of Exceptional Caliber

Robert Edward Lee was a man of exceptional caliber, and the best soldier on either side during the Civil War. Through his intrepid and clever leadership, the Army of Northern Virginia repeatedly defeated Union Army contingents two and three times its size.

Graduating second in his class at West Point Military Academy, Lee never received a single demerit while a cadet there.

Prior to the outbreak of the Civil War, Lee was a high-ranking officer in the Union Army, and participated in America's war with Mexico. It was an excruciatingly difficult decision for him to make, to resign his U.S. Army commission and assume command of the Confederate Army of Northern Virginia. While he loved the Union, Lee still could not lift up sword against his own home state of Virginia. His family had been living there for five generations.

He believed slavery to be immoral. He had inherited slaves from his family household, but released them from bondage. By contrast, President Abraham Lincoln waited until two years into the war to issue his Emancipation Proclamation. If the slaves were people after Lincoln's own heart, why did he delay announcement of his proclamation for two years? His original goal was just to hold the Union together, slavery or no slavery. He did not initially see himself as a liberator of slaves, nor did he commence his war of aggression on the South for that goal.

To all who, today, besmirch and slander the name of Lee by taking down his statues and hiding them as symbols of public disapprobation, I say Lee was worth a thousand of you!

Some Real Collusion

If some of our high-ranking officials have dual citizenship with Russia—that would be Russian collusion. If some of our senior U.S. politicians also served in the Russian military—that would be Russian collusion. If congressmen, after they are elected, were expected to spend two weeks in Russia with the prime minister for indoctrination—that would be Russian collusion. If you had to publicly proffer your loyalty to "ARPAC," the Russian lobby, to be approved to run for the presidency—that would be Russian collusion. If Congress funneled billions of dollars of taxpayer money to Russia each year—that would be Russian collusion. If Russia could kill 34 U.S. sailors and the U.S. responds by covering it up—that would be Russian collusion.

Of course, we know none of this is true, but if you swap the words "Russia" and "Russian" with "Israel" and "Israeli" then you have an accurate picture of America's political landscape in D.C. So why aren't we talking about Israeli collusion?

Go After Soros, Too

I wanted to comment on AFP's front-page article [in the Aug. 14 & 21 edition] about the police officers suing Black Lives Matter over instigating the attack on their fellow officers in 2016. I can only say, it's about time that this happened. I remember that day well. I found myself shocked that a former service member would do such a thing, attacking police officers. It goes against everything we are taught in the military to serve the country and adhere to law and order.

George Soros has donated millions to radical leftist groups like Black Lives Matter. The billionaire political agitator wants to destroy the U.S. What better way to do that than to gin up a revolution by buying off criminal thugs?

The truth is, the cops should sue Soros as well Black Lives Matter for enabling them.

Anywhere you look, you can always find Soros up to no good. The U.S. needs to take a page out of Hungary's book and expose Soros for his dirty meddling. That would be a good place to start.

Want to Make Uncle Sam Fall Madly in Love With You?

All you have to do is . . . nothing!

We've got a surefire way you can make Uncle Sam one happy guy, and all you have to do is nothing. By doing nothing, you give the government more power, and lots more of your estate. In return, Uncle Sam becomes just like one of the family, and as such, becomes your happiest heir when you pass on!

Just follow these five simple steps to make sure Uncle Sam gets a big, fat portion of the things you have worked so hard for your entire life:

1 Don't worry about your will or trust. Without a will or trust, the court will get to decide how to disburse your assets. Of course, the court doesn't know you have stepchildren you're fond of, or that you want to remember a few of your favorite charities in your will – and the court doesn't care.

2 Don't worry about your will or trust. Without a will the court will select someone to handle your estate during probate. Even if you would have selected a close friend to have this responsibility, the court won't know that and won't care.

3 Don't worry about your will or trust. If you have minor children for whom guardianship is important, guess what, the court will pick the guardian for you. This means you can sit back and relax—the court will decide who should take care of your kids.

4 Don't worry about your will or trust. The estate tax dollars that your government could collect will be used for, well, anything the government chooses. Just think what a few of your favorite charities—those you've been supporting during your life—could do with that money.

5 Don't worry about a will or trust. Your heirs will be grieving after you are gone. Why not saddle them with the added responsibility of figuring out your affairs, and what decisions you might have made;

Your bequests and donations to FDFA go to help AFP survive—and give you a great tax write-off for 2017.

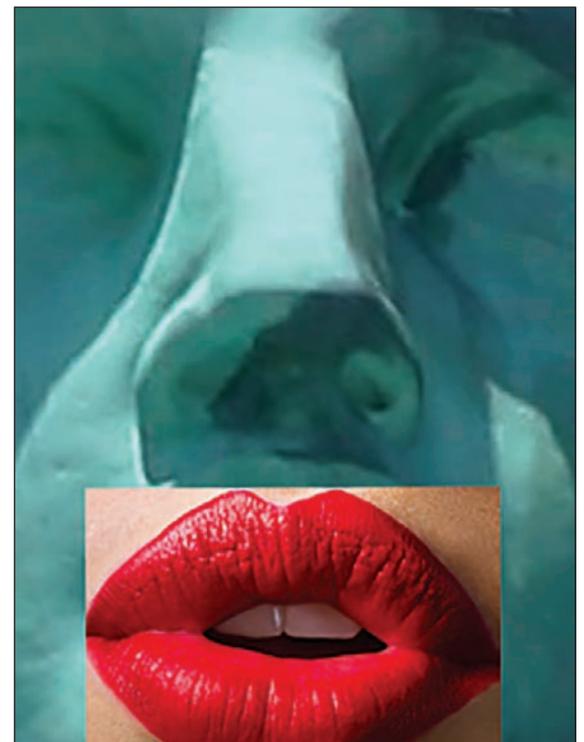

because now they will just have to guess?

Pardon the irony, but have we made our point? These are some darn good reasons why you should write your will. We at the FOUNDATION TO DEFEND THE FIRST AMENDMENT and AMERICAN FREE PRESS urge you not to subscribe to the idea that you, your family, and the charities you care about are better off if you pass without a will. Don't continue to put off the minor inconvenience of making a will. The peace of mind will be worth the time you spend on getting your will done.

Let Uncle Sam take care of himself. Your family will be thankful. Your favorite charities will be thankful.

By the way, we've heard on more than one occasion that some of you are a little nervous about meeting with an attorney. But an attorney who specializes in wills and estate planning is the right person to seek out because they can help you accomplish your goals.

We can also send you some information on writing a will and, if you like, ways you can include the FOUNDATION TO DEFEND THE FIRST AMENDMENT, AMERICAN FREE PRESS and your other favorite charities in your plans.

Writing a will is too important to delay. It's important for you, your heirs, and for AMERICAN FREE PRESS and the FOUNDATION TO DEFEND THE FIRST AMENDMENT. Contact us today.
